WASHINGTON.

Protracted Debate in the Senate on the Suffrage Amendment.

The Supplementary Banking Bill Killed in the House.

Further Debate on the Proposition to Reduce the Army.

Special Dispatches to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

The Constitutional Amendment came up in the Senate to-day on motion of Senator STEWART, who moved that the Senate recede and concur in the House bill. This question was divided, and the motion to recede was carried, but the one to concur was lost. This brought up the original proposition of the Senate Judiciary Committee, when there followed the old arguments and amendments, which were made, and offered, and voted down eight or ten days ago when it was under discussion in the Senate. Innumerable speeches were made on the various propositions. Senator CONKLING made a strong, sarcastic speech, full of force and point, against the Judiciary Committee amendment, on the ground that it was wholly inadequate to the object proposed to be reached. It is now 11 o'clock P. M. The Senate has been in continuous session since 12 o'clock, and the final vote appears almost as far off as ever.

DEBATE ON THE BANK BILL.

The House was engaged all day on the Supplementary Bank bill, and a very lively contest took place on the fourth section, which proposed a redistribution of the currency. The section was first amended so as to except banks with less than $200,000 capital from the scaling process, which met with the approval of the Committee on Banking. Then a great variety of amendments were voted upon, but all rejected until the amendment of Mr. COBURN was reached, which proposed to make the redistribution upon the basis of property and population. This was carried by the Western and Southern members voting together, in the belief that they would thereby get a larger share than under the Committee's amendment. But in refusing to take what they could get, by attempting to get more, they lost all. The adoption of COBURN'S amendment made the bill objectionable to its original friends, and when Mr. INGERSOLL proposed as a substitute to sections 2 and 4 several new sections, virtually opening the whole national system to free banking, they were agreed to by a large majority, simply for the purpose of defeating the bill. The next motion was to lay the bill on the table, which prevailed—yeas 92, nays 78. Pending a motion to reconsider this vote, the House took a recess until evening. The bill is practically dead for this session.

THE REDUCTION OF THE ARMY.

Gen. BUTLER opened the debate in the House this evening, on the Army Appropriation bill, with a characteristic speech in favor of his sweeping amendment, which aims at total reorganization of the military service. He proposes that the grade of General shall be abolished after the 4th of March next; that of Lieutenant-General as soon as a vacancy shall occur; that brevets shall be conferred only for distinguished service in the presence of the enemy; that after July next there shall be only three Major-Generals and five Brigadier-Generals, and twenty-four regiments of infantry, six regiments of cavalry and three regiments of artillery. Mr. BUTLER stated, in his speech this evening, that the adoption of this amendment would save the country $7,428,000 in the pay of officers alone, and reduce in the aggregate the expenses of the military establishment from sixty-eight millions and some hundreds of thousands of dollars to thirty-three millions of dollars. Mr. SHELLABARGER followed in a short speech in opposition. He thought that we had better follow the advice of Gen. GRANT in reference to this question, namely, a gradual reduction, to which Gen. BUTLER demurred. The debate dragged on for an hour longer, when the House adjourned without taking any action on any of the amendments. The feeling among members appears to be averse to the wholesale onslaught of Gen. BUTLER on the army, and there is not much probability that his extreme views on the question will be adopted by Congress at least during the present session.

GEN. GRANT AND PRESIDENT JOHNSON.

The sticklers for official etiquette appear to be unduly annoyed and irritated at the announcement that Gen. GRANT does not intend to ride with President JOHNSON to the Capitol on Inauguration Day, as has been customary in the case of outgoing and incoming Presidents. Should Gen. GRANT see fit to adopt this course, he can refer to at least one precedent in the history of the Government. When JACKSON arrived in this city in 1829, the then President, Mr. ADAMS, refused to hold any intercourse with Gen. JACKSON on account of the Mrs. Eaton scandal, and on the morning of the 4th of March, when JACKSON was sworn into office, Mr. ADAMS, instead of going to the Capitol, went from the executive mansion to a private dwelling. Gen. JACKSON rode to the Capitol alone and Mr. ADAMS took no part in the ceremonies.

SENATOR BAYARD AND W. W. CORCORAN.

The Senate Committee on the District of Columbia resumed, this morning, the investigation of the claim of W. W. CORCORAN, Esq. DOHNER, formerly steward to Mr. BODISCO, the Russian Minister, who is charged with having heard certain statements made by Senator BAYARD and Mr CORCORAN relative to the assassination of President LINCOLN, appeared before the Committee, but refused to testify, claiming his diplomatic privilege, and was allowed to depart. Senator BAYARD and Mr. CORCORAN both appeared before the Committee voluntarily and contradicted the testimony of the negro servant who testified before the Committee a few days since that he had heard Messrs. CORCORAN and BAYARD signify their willingness to pay any one who would assassinate Mr. LINCOLN. Both of these gentlemen pronounce the whole thing a fabrication and without a vestige of truth. Dr. SAMUEL MILLER and the correspondent of the New-York Tribune were also examined by the Committee. The Committee will meet again on Friday morning and resume the investigation of the claim.

THE NEW TAX BILL.

The Tax bill, which was pushed through the House last night, will make six hundred pages when engrossed, and is the longest bill ever passed by Congress. It was ordered to be sent to the Senate at once, though it will occupy the Engrossing Clerks until Saturday. It seems practically impossible that it should be acted upon in the Senate, yet is understood that Gen. SCHENCK is not without hope. It will be a matter of sincere regret if the great labor of the Committee and the House is lost upon this measure simply for want of time.

A DEMOCRATIC MANŒUVRE.

The Democrats played a quiet yet useless game in the House to-day. It was reported that, as soon as the Bank bill was concluded, Mr. BOUTWELL would report from the Reconstruction Committee a bill providing a Provisional Government for the State of Mississippi, and would push it through, so that it might reach the President in time to compel him to veto and return it this session, as anything that passes after Friday he can smother by putting it in his pocket. There were a great many amendments offered to the Bank bill, and the Democrats united in demanding the yeas and nays on each, thus prolonging for the whole afternoon, what could have been otherwise finished in an hour. It was a useless waste of time.

THE RECONSTRUCTION OF VIRGINIA.

The subject of the reconstruction of Virginia has been under discussion in the Senate Judiciary Committee for some days past and a report may be expected next week. No definite conclusion has yet been reached on the subject, but the feeling of the Committee appears to be in favor of submitting the Underwood Constitution, with certain changes, to the people.

THE TENURE-OF-OFFICE BILL.

The Tenure-of Office bill did not come up in the Senate to-day any further than the announcement in reference to it by Senator EDMUNDS that he desired to have it considered during the present week. There is an understanding among Senators that it shall be taken up on Saturday, when an effort will be made to pass the House bill repealing it.

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, who had under consideration the credentials of H. V. C. MILLER, as Senator elect from Georgia, reported to-day adversely on his admission, for the reasons given in the report of the same Committee on the question of the reconstruction of Georgia, about twelve days ago.

THE MONEY LOAN BILL.

The bill to prevent National Banks from loaning money on currency collaterals was signed in both Houses to-day, and will reach the President to-morrow and be signed at once.

SPEAKER COLFAX TO RESIGN.

As it is necessary that the Vice-President elect shall be sworn into office before noon of the day of inauguration, in order that he may call the Senate to order and swear in the new Senators, it is understood that Speaker COLFAX will deliver his valedictory to the House, and resign a day or two in advance. The House will therefore have to select a Speaker for the balance of the session, which choice will undoubtedly fall upon Hon. T. M. POMEROY, of New-York, who, besides being an excellent presiding officer, will in no wise conflict with the canvass now going on for the Speakership of the next Congress, as he is not reelected.

SICKNESS OF MR. WASHBURNE.

Hon. E. B. WASHBURNE is lying very ill at his residence, and his friends entertain serious apprehensions for his recovery. In all probability he will not be able to resume his seat again in Congress at this session, and perhaps not at all. In his absence Mr. BLAINE becomes acting Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, and general manager of its business before the House.

GENS. GRANT AND BADEAU.

The report in the New-York Herald of to-day about a difficulty between Gen. GRANT and Gen. BADEAU, resulting in a rupture of their relations, is pure invention. The story rests upon no other foundation than the transfer of Gen. BADEAU'S desk from one room to another at army headquarters, without any change whatever of duties.

GENS. GRANT AND BUTLER.

Gen. and Mrs. GRANT called on Gen. BUTLER to-day.

INAUGURATION VISITORS.

A great many prominent people are gathering here from all quarters, though the crowd is not so great as on previous like occasions. Among the recent arrivals from New-York are: Gov. FENTON, the Senator elect; Hon. WM. A. DARLING, Gen. PHILIP S. CROOKE, W. B. ASTOR and J. J. ASTOR, Jr.

THE NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Unexpectedly to many the Conference report on the Naval Appropriation bill was agreed to in the Senate to-day. The point made against it, to the effect that new legislation could not be introduced by a Conference Committee, having failed, it will probably pass the House, and the features as telegraphed in these dispatches last night will stand as law.

A RACING ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of some prominent citizens of Washington was held last night at the St. James Hotel, for the purpose of forming an organization perfecting arrangements for a Spring meeting of race horses at the National race course near this city. Among those present were Col. CHARLES M. ALEXANDER, City Postmaster; Col. SPEAR, of Philadelphia; Major A. C. RICHARDS, Col. MASSEY and Dr. HAYS. At 7:30 Mr. GEORGE W. BUNKER was chosen Chairman, and stated the object for which the meeting was called. The name of the Association was fixed as the National Fair Association of the District of Columbia, after which Col. CHARLES M. ALEXANDER was elected President.

FORTIETH CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

MEMORIALS AND PETITIONS.

Mr. CONKLING presented a petition for the amendment of the Constitution, so as to recognize Almighty God. Also a petition for the modification of Naturalization laws. Also a remonstrance of a wool-growers' association in New-York State, against the renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty.

Mr. POMEROY presented several petitions for equal suffrage, and one praying for an amendment to the Constitution, so as to recognize Almighty God.

BRADY'S WAR VIEWS.

Mr. WILSON presented a memorial asking the Government to purchase Mr. BRADY'S collection of war views.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. POMEROY, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported, with amendments, the bill granting a right of way to the Memphis, El Paso and Pacific Railroad and Telegraph Company, from El Paso, Texas, to the Pacific Ocean. The bill authorizes the Company to construct a road between the points named, to connect with other Pacific Railroads, but grants no sections of public lands.

Mr. TIPTON, from the same Committee, reported with amendments a bill granting land to aid in the construction of a railroad from Sioux City, Iowa, to Columbus, Nebraska. It grants ten sections per mile on each side to the State of Nebraska, for the benefit of the road.

THE EXECUTIVE MANSION.

Mr. FESSENDEN, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported adversely to the bill to purchase a site for an Executive Mansion, and the Committee were discharged from its further consideration; also favorably the House bill to establish a Police Court for the District of Columbia, on which he asked immediate action, but

Mr. HENDRICKS objected.

THE JUDICIARY COMMITTEE.

Mr. STEWART, from the Judiciary Committee, reported adversely on Mr. SUMNER'S bill to strike out from the Naturalization laws the word "white" wherever it occurs.

Mr. CONKLING, from the same Committee, reported adversely to Mr. SUMNER'S bill to regulate prosecutions for embezzling and kindred offences.

Mr. STEWART, from the same Committe, reported the credentials of H. V. MILLER as Senator elect from Georgia, with a resolution that he be not allowed to take his seat.

THE LAST AMNESTY PROCLAMATION.

Mr. EDMUNDS, from the same Committee, submitted a report on the President's message regarding his Christmas Amnesty Proclamation, accompanied with a resolution "that in the opinion of the Senate, the proclamation of the President of the United States of the 25th of December, 1868, purporting to grant general pardon and amnesty to all persons guilty of treason and acts of hostility to the United States during the late rebellion, with restoration of rights, &c., &c., was not authorized by the Constitution or laws."

Mr. HENDRICKS stated that he disagreed with the majority of the Committee, and would express his views when the report came up for action.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported with amendments the House bill to restrict and regulate the franking privilege.

The bill as amended provides that it shall not be lawful for any officer of the Government, member of Congress, or other person entitled by law to the franking privilege, to exercise said privilege otherwise than by his or her written or authorized signature upon the matter franked, except heads of Departments and heads of Bureaus now entitled by law to the franking privilege, who shall be allowed to frank all official matter pertaining to their Departments or Bureaus by the use of a stamp which shall designate the object for which it is used, under such regulations as the Postmaster-General shall prescribe; and all letters or other mail matter not thus franked shall be charged with the rates of postage to which are now or may be hereafter established by law.

ALASKA FURS.

Mr. NYE presented a remonstrance of citizens of San Francisco against the passage of the pending bill to protect the fur-bearing animals of Alaska.

REDUCTION OF THE NAVY.

On motion of Mr. DRAKE the report of the Committee of Conference upon the bill to amend the various acts relating to the navy was taken up.

Mr. GRIMES explained the bill, and said it was designed to make great reduction in the size and expense of the navy, and especially the Marine Corps.

Messrs. EDMUNDS and DAVIS criticised the report of the Committee of Conference, as introducing new matter not contained in the original bill; and the latter objected to it upon the ground that it provided for too great reduction of the Marine Corps.

Mr. GRIMES said that he was in favor of reducing the Marine Corps still further. He saw no reason why it should be now any larger than before the war.

The report was agreed to.

REVENUE FRAUDS.

A resolution was adopted directing the Attorney-General to furnish a list of persons convicted of violating the Revenue laws, with the fines and other punishments imposed on them, and the number and dates of the pardons given to such persons by the President.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN, Monday, the 22d inst., was set apart for the consideration of business from the Committee on Finance; and on motion of Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, Saturday next was set apart for the consideration of his bill to regulate naturalization.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Mr. STEWART moved to take up the message of the House, asking the Committee of Conference in regard to the Constitutional Amendment. Carried.

Mr. STEWART moved that the Senate insist on its amendments and agree to a Committee of Conference.

Mr. WILLIAMS said that when there was a difference between the House and the Senate in regard to the Military Reconstruction bill, a Committee of Conference had been proposed, but objected to by many members, on the ground that it was too important a subject to be dealt with by such a Committee; and he thought the same objection applied with greater force to intrusting this more important matter to a Committee of Conference.

Mr. BUCKALEW also thought the subject too important to have the difference in regard to it settled by such a Committee.

Mr. STEWART withdrew his motion to insist, and moved that the Senate recede and agree to the amendment made in the House.

Mr. BUCKALEW continued his remarks, in the course of which he said that in nearly every case of late years, in which there had been a disagreement between the House and the Senate in regard to any measure of a political character, the House, or rather the man who controlled the House, had always at last had the matter his own way. Mr. BUCKALEW was proceeding at length, when Mr. MORRILL, of Maine, raised the point of order that Mr. STEWART'S motion was not a privileged question, and as the morning hour had already expired, the unfinished business of yesterday came next in order.

The President said he would submit the question to the Senate, but Mr. MORRILL withdrew the point of order.

Mr. TRUMBULL asked whether the bill to reorganize the Judiciary, which had been set down for 1 o'clock, did not come next in order?

Mr. FESSENDEN—I suppose that we are going to have such a scene as we had yesterday, (referring to a confused discussion about the order of business.)

Mr. TRUMBULL—I do not rise to discuss the point, but merely to make an inquiry of the Chair.

The President decided the hour appointed for consideration of Judiciary having passed the bill lost its place.

Mr. BUCKALEW resumed the floor and made an argument to show the great importance of the Senate's insisting on the part of the Constitutional Amendment providing, "That Congress shall have power to prescribe the mode of choosing electors for President and Vice-President."

Mr. CAMERON said, that every one knew that Gen. FREMONT had been defeated out of the vote of Pennsylvania in 1856 by the Democratic Party, and last Fall Philadelphia had been carried fraudulently by the same party. He believed that Pennsylvania was no worse than other States, and whatever wrongs she had done in this respect he proposed to put a stop to. [Laughter.] He was entirely opposed to the proposition of his colleague, which, if adopted, would allow the party in power, before a Presidential election, to ferrymander the States for its own benefit.

Mr. EDMUNDS spoke briefly against Mr. BUCKALEW'S proposition. He agreed with Mr. CAMERON, that so far as it would change at all the present mode of choosing Electors, it would give the party having a majority in Congress on the eve of a Presidential election power to arrange the mode of choosing the electors in each State so as to preserve its own ascendency. It was also in direct conflict with the design of the framers of the Constitution, which was that the President should be elected by the States, and not directly by the people of the whole country.

Mr. WILSON said he would vote against the motion of the Senator from Nevada (Mr. STEWART.) He had hoped that early in the session Congress would have matured an amendment securing to all citizens of the United States an equal right to vote and hold office. But the first part of the session had been allowed to pass without action on the subject, and when the House had sent to the Senate a very imperfect proposition, for which the Senate had substituted a more comprehensive one, he regretted that the House had refused to agree to the Senate amendment; but now fearing the danger of delay he was willing to vote for the House proposition if it could be amended so as to secure to colored citizens the right to hold office as well as the right to vote.

Mr. CONKLING inquired of the Chair what the pending motion of the Senator from Nevada was.

The President replied that it was merely a motion to recede from the Senate amendments.

Mr. STEWART said his motion was to recede and concur in the House proposition.

Mr. CONKLING said that it would be better if the motion were as stated by the Chair, because the Senate could recede by a majority vote, while it would require a two-thirds vote to concur in the House proposition. The motion ought to be divided.

Mr. STEWART said he did not care to have the Senate recede unless it also concurred. He feared that unless the amendments were adopted now it would fall for the session.

Mr. POMEROY thought that according to strict parliamentary law the Senate, by receding from its own amendments, would adopt the House proposition.

After a brief but confused discussion of rules, and the effect of a vote to recede, the President asked the Senator from Nevada (Mr. STEWART) to state explicitly what his motion was.

Mr. STEWART—My motion is to recede from the amendments made to the House proposition by the Senate, and to agree to the House proposition.

Mr. SHERMAN—I call for a division on the question.

Mr. POMEROY—After we vote to recede.

Mr. SHERMAN—"Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof."

Mr. HENDRICKS—I do not choose to adopt that view. It is to be fixed rule of this body that a vote to recede passes the original measure, we ought to know it now.

Mr. MORTON—Is it possible that a vote to recede from a proposition entirely different from that of the House is to be regarded as a vote agreeing to the proposition of the House?

Mr. HENDRICKS—It is not a question of possibility. It is a question of law, and I understand that it has been found possible to make, in that way, a great many laws which stand on the statute books now.

On motion of Mr. STEWART, the order for a recess was rescinded.

There was further discussion of the question whether a vote to recede from the Senate amendments would be in effect a concurrence in the House proposition.

Mr. HENDRICKS asked the Chair to decide the question.

The President submitted the question to the Senate in this form: In the opinion of the Senators, will a vote to recede pass the bill? And it was decided in the negative.

The Senate then receded from its amendments to the original House proposition by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Anthony, Cameron, Cattell, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Fessenden, Frelinghuysen, Harris, Howard, Kellogg, McDonald, Morgan, Morrill of Maine, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Nye, Patterson of New-Hampshire, Pomeroy, Robertson, Stewart, Thayer, Trumbull, Van Winkle, Welch, Willey, Williams, Yates—33.

NAYS—Messrs. Abbott, Buckalew, Davis, Dixon, Doolittle, Edmunds, Fowler, Grimes, Hendricks, McCreery, McDonald, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of Pennsylvania, Pomeroy, Ross, Saulsbury, Sawyer, Spencer, Sumner, Thayer, Vickers, Warner, Welch, Whyte, Wilson—27.

Mr. STEWART then moved to proceed with the consideration of the Constitutional Amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee, as follows:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Mr. WILLIAMS—I move that the Senate adjourn. [Cries of "No! no!" and confusion.]

Mr. STEWART—I will call for the yeas and nays on every motion to adjourn. I call for them on this motion.

The Senate refused to adjourn—yeas 21, nays 35.

Mr. STEWART'S motion was then carried, and the amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee was before the Senate.

Mr. NYE expressed the hope that it would not be adopted, and that the Senate would not occupy much time in the discussion of it. Much time had been occupied in discussing the propositions to give the colored man the right of suffrage, but he was now satisfied that it had been wasted, because it was apparent that no amendment could be agreed to so long as professed friends of the measure voted with its enemies, merely because their own whims were not adopted by the majority. For years the two Senators from Massachusetts had talked eloquently upon the right of the negro to vote and the power and protection the ballot would give him, but now when there came from the House a resolution proposing to give the negro the right, the Senator from Massachusetts (SUMNER,) voted "No." Very loud laughter.] The same was true of the other Senator from Massachusetts, (WILSON,) and of the Senator from Kansas, (POMEROY,) who had grown gray and bald in demanding the ballot for the negro. [Laughter.] Such being the course of the oldest and loudest champions of negro suffrage in the Senate he (NYE) was opposed to spending further time in the consideration of propositions to amend the Constitution in this respect, and would vote henceforth during the session to leave the poor old Constitution alone and attend to the pressing practical questions demanding the attention of the Senate.

Mr. WELCH, on the contrary, not only hoped that the resolution would pass, but also that a great deal of time would be occupied in discussing it.

Mr. HOWARD, as before, opposed the resolution of the Judiciary Committee for several reasons, the chief one being that by implication it left it in the power of Congress to say that none but members of some particular religious sect should hold office.

Mr. DRAKE again offered his amendment in these words:

"No citizen of the United States shall, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude, be denied the right to vote or hold office."

This, he thought, was better than the Judiciary Committee's proposition, because it avoided the implication contained in the latter that the right to vote was a natural right.

The amendment was rejected.

Several other amendments were offered and voted down.

Mr. NYE moved to strike out all after the enacting clause, and substitute the amendment as it came from the House, and expressed his belief that unless the amendment were carried, the Constitutional Amendment would fail altogether.

Mr. EDMUNDS—Why?

Mr. NYE—Because you cannot get votes enough for it. [Laughter.]

Mr. EDMUNDS—Won't you vote for it?

Mr. NYE—No, Sir. I will not vote for it because I believe it will be fairly open to criticism, and will be defeated in almost every State.

Mr. WILSON briefly vindicated himself from the charge of inconsistency made by Mr. NYE, and insisted that his action on this subject now was entirely consistent with his previous words and actions in regard to it.

Mr. HOWARD renewed the offer of his substitute, as follows:

"Citizens of African descent shall have the same right to vote and hold office in the States and Territories as other citizens."

Mr. SAULSBURY suggested that the annoyance and trouble caused to Congress, by the mistake of the Almighty in making distinctions of color and sex, might be more effectually obviated by abolishing those distinctions than by saying that they should not be regarded. It might be provided by one sweeping amendment, that all men should be of one color, say blue—[laughter]—and that there should be no distinction between the sex, and then these disturbing questions being out of the way, Congress might devote its attention wholly to the practical interests of a great people, blue and without sex. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOWARD'S motion was lost—yeas 22, nays 27.

Mr. HENDRICKS offered an amendment like that offered in the previous discussion by Col. BUCKALEW, providing that the constitutional amendment should be submitted for ratification to the Legislatures, the most numerous branches of which should be elected after the adoption of the amendment by Congress. He thought that if the Republican Party wished to keep faith with the people, it would adopt this plan.

The amendment was lost—yeas 12, nays 40.

Mr. DIXON again offered the proposition that the amendment should be submitted for ratification to Conventions instead of State Legislatures. Lost.

Mr. VICKERS offered an amendment providing that no person should be denied the right of suffrage because of participation in the late insurrection, unless actually convicted of treason. Lost.

The report of the Senate Judiciary Committee was then adopted by the following vote:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Cragin, Drake, Edmunds, Ferry, Frelinghuysen, Harlan, Harris, Kellogg, McDonald, Morgan, Morrill of Vermont, Morton, Osborn, Patterson of New-Hampshire, Pomeroy, Pool, Ramsey, Rice, Robertson, Ross, Sawyer, Spencer, Stewart, Thayer, Van Winkle, Wade, Warner, Welch, Willey, Williams, Wilson—35.

NAYS—Messrs. Baynard, Buckalew, Davis, Fowler, Hendricks, McCreery, Norton, Patterson of Tennessee, Saulsbury, Vickers, Whyte—11.

The amendment adopted is as follows:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote and hold office shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

At 11:45 o'clock, the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. UPSON, from the Committee on Elections, made a report in the Louisiana contested election case, with resolutions declaring that SIMON JONES, not having received a majority of the votes cast for Representative from the Second Congressional District of Louisiana, was not entitled to a seat, and that neither J. W. MENARD or CALEB S. HUNT was entitled. The report and resolutions, with a minority report from Mr. KERR, were laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

THE PORT OF CHICAGO.

On motion of Mr. JUDD, the Secretary of War was directed to have an examination and survey made at the port of Chicago, with a view to secure such additional and enlarged harbor facilities as the necessities of commerce at that point demand.

THE NATIONAL BANKING BILL.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the act supplementary to the National Banking bill, the previous question having been seconded yesterday, and Mr. POMEROY, who reported the bill, being entitled to close the debate, yielded part of his time to Mr. POLAND, who argued in support of an amendment which he had offered looking to the withdrawal and cancellation of all the United States legal-tender notes and their conversion into a new issue of bonds, bearing interest at 4½ and 4 per cent. and redeemable after thirty and fifty years. He defended the New-England States from the charge of being grasping. They had taken the national banking currency because they thought that to be for the good of the country. They had taken it because the Western States did not then choose to take it. He declared himself in favor of the free banking system, believing it to be the true remedy to which they should at last come.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, addressed the House for twenty minutes in advocacy of the amendment submitted by him to the second section of the bill in reference to the mode of letting banks go into liquidation. It proposes that the interest on the bonds deposited to secure their circulation shall cease, and that in the delivery to the Comptroller of the Currency of their circulating notes in sums of $100, or multiple thereof, a pro rata proportion of the bonds shall be delivered up, and the accrued interest on them be paid.

Mr. PRICE—The gentleman's amendment leads to this: that no banking institution could wind up as a National Bank and go out of business entirely until it shall have farmed in the identical money received from the Treasury. A deposit of legal-tender notes would not relieve it. Do I understand that to be the meaning of the amendment?

Mr. BUTLER—Exactly.

Mr. PRICE—Well, that is perfectly awful. [Laughter.] That is all I have to say.

Mr. BUTLER—What is perfectly awful in it?

Mr. PRICE—I will tell you if you want me.

Mr. BUTLER—Well.

Mr. PRICE—Under that proposition a bank could not wind up in ten years; it could not get its circulation in. Some of it might never come in. The Government, under this law, gets the benefit of the destroyed circulation.

Mr. EVANS asked Mr. PRICE how the country could ever have a specie payment unless the banks did their own redemption.

Mr. PRICE—I could answer that question if I had time.

Mr. BUTLER—I will give you time to answer it; answer away.

Mr. PRICE—The answer to that is found in this fact: that the law under which the National Bank system was organized provides that banks may redeem in the legal-tender notes of the country; and it provides, also, that when banks wish to wind up, they can return as many of the identical notes received as they can get possession of, and make up the balance in the legal-tender notes.

Mr. BUTLER—Now I will answer the answer. True, they can not return as many of these notes as they please. My amendment allows that, too, only when they do it, they shall not draw interest on their bonds deposited. And now, my friend from Iowa says they cannot wind up in ten years. Well, they never should wind up until they pay back the currency they received; they promised to do it, they agreed to do it, and they have no right to throw the responsibility on the Government.

Mr. WOOD offered an amendment as follows:

Every Association authorized under this act, and the act to which this is supplementary, should provide for the redemption of its notes at some one of the principal money-loan centres of the United States, to be selected by the Comptroller of the Currency, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to assort and seal up under Government seal all National Bank notes received for payment of taxes, and send them for redemption in legal-tender notes to the redemption agency.

Mr. INGERSOLL being allowed five minutes to explain his amendment, said that in the first place it proposed to make the banking system of the country a free one, so that any citizen of the United States, living in whatsoever section of the country he might, could establish a banking institution if it was deemed a good investment and legitimate business, without regard to the amount of circulation or banking capital held in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New-York, or any other State. Why would members insist upon it, that there should be a restriction with reference to the amount of capital that men should invest in the banking business, or in reference to the amount of circulation that banks should issue, when it was admitted that all the circulation was well secured to all the bill holders?

Mr. POMEROY concluded the debate. He favored the amendment of Mr. BUTLER so far as it applied to insolvent banks, but not as it applied to solvent banks. He expressed his belief that the Free Banking law of New-York was the best law that the wisdom of man had ever made; but he said that when Congress declared that not only the Free Banking law of the State of New-York, but all other State banking laws, should be swept away by the board, and a new national system established, he for one had accepted the situation, and had endeavored to be true and faithful to that banking system. He believed, however, that it was in the wisdom of Congress to make this national system as perfect and complete as it was possible for any legislative system to be.

The debate being closed, the House proceeded to vote on the several amendments pending.

Mr. INGERSOLL had the rule read which forbids members interested in the result of any question to vote on it, and said he would leave the matter to the sense of honor of the members.

The amendment offered by Mr. PRICE to the fourth section, to increase the allowance of circulation to banks with capital not exceeding $200,000 from 80 to 90 per cent. of the capital stock, was agreed to.

The first, second and third amendments offered by the Committee on Banking and Currency, being merely formal, were agreed to.

Mr. BUCKLAND'S amendment, regulating bank circulation at the rate of $1,250,000 for each member of Congress from States, was rejected.

The amendment by Mr. SMITH, to increase the maximum limit of national circulation by $200,000,000, was rejected.

The amendment offered by Mr. COBURN as a substitute for the fourth section was agreed to by yeas 94, nays 86.

The substitute is as follows:

SECTION 4. And therefore be it enacted, To insure a better distribution of the national banking currency, that there may be issued to associations of natural persons associations organized in States and Territories having a less banking circulation than their pro rata above, as herein authorized, shall within three years, if required, be withdrawn and destroyed as the organized in States having a circulation exceeding that provided for by the act entitled act to amend an act entitled an act to provide for a national currency secured by a pledge of United States bonds, and to provide for the circulation and redemption thereof, approved March 3, 1865, to ascertain which, the the Comptroller of the Currency shall, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, cause to be numbered, such quantity of circulating notes, in blank, of the denominations of one dollar, two dollars, three dollars, five dollars, ten dollars, twenty dollars, fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars and one thousand dollars, as may be required to supply under this act the associations entitled to receive the same, which notes shall express upon their face that they are secured by United States bonds deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, by the written or engraved signatures of the Treasurer and Register, and by the imprint of the seal of the Treasury, and shall also express upon their face the promise of the association receiving the same to pay on demand, attested by the signature of the President, or Vice-President and Cashier, and the said notes shall be put such device and such other statements, and shall be in such form, as the Secretary of the Treasury shall by regulation direct; provided, that not more than one-sixth part of the whole circulation of the associations shall be issued in any one denomination than $5, and that after specie payments shall be resumed, no association shall be furnished with notes of a less denomination than $5.

The bonds hereby authorized shall be of such denomination, not less than $50, as may be deemed expedient by the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. —. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be and he hereby is directed to buy in open market, at the lowest market price, any of the gold-bearing interest bonds of the United States issued under any former act of Congress, with the lawful money received in exchange for the bonds hereby authorized to be issued; and he is hereby prohibited from using or disposing of in any other manner the lawful money so received in exchange for such bonds; and he is hereby further directed to cancel and destroy, in accordance with the manner now provided by law, each and every bond so purchased as aforesaid under the provisions of this act.

SEC. —. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

The question was next taken on Mr. WOOD'S amendment, and it was rejected—yeas 15, nays 149.

Mr. WOOD then moved that the bill and amendments be laid on the table. The motion was agreed to—yeas 92, nays 78, as follows:

Mr. WOOD moved to reconsider the vote, and lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. INGERSOLL moved to adjourn.

Pending the vote by yeas and nays, the hour of 4:30 arrived, and the House took a recess till 7:30; the evening session to be for Appropriation bills.

The Bank bill comes up to-morrow, on the motion to reconsider.

EVENING SESSION.

The House met again at 7:30, in Committee of the Whole, Mr. FERRY in the chair, and resumed the consideration of the Army Appropriation bill; the question being on the amendment offered by Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, for the reduction of the army.

THE REDUCTION OF THE ARMY.

Mr. BUTLER addressed the Committee in explanation and advocacy of this amendment. He said that if it were adopted there would be an army of 25,000 men in the field, twenty-four regiments of infantry, three of artillery and four of cavalry, fully officered, fully equipped, and with a full staff department, and yet save $30,000,000 in the current expenses of the army. He proceeded to show the largely disproportionate number of officers in the army, when compared with the force and to show the immense cost of the officers of the staff departments. He had asked the Committee on Military Affairs for information as to the pay of army officers, but could not get it. He had inquired at the War Department with no better success. At length he had

WOMEN AS COVERNMENT CLERKS.

The Employment of Women in the Departments at Washington—Their Qualifications—The Question of Equal Pay with Male Clerks.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday Feb. 13, 1869.

Whatever arguments may be urged, with more or less force against the theory of woman's political equality with man, very few persons deny the justice of the principle that equal work should command equal pay without regard to the sex of the laborer. But it is one thing to acknowledge the right of a principle and quite another to practice it. Women are known to be as good printers, teachers, telegraphers, clerks, &c., as men. But as fewer occupations are open to them, their necessity for employment is greater, therefore their services can be obtained for less; consequently they are not worth so much, according to the unprincipled idea of trade, which measures the worth of an article, not by its cost, but by the necessities of the buyer. An example of justice by our National Government in placing the labor of woman upon an equal footing with that of man in the Departments, could not fail to exert a wholesome influence upon individual employers and the country at large.

In the Treasury Department upward of 3,000 clerks are employed, about 500 of whom are women. The salary of these women is fixed by law at about one-half the average salary paid to the men clerks, though some of them are engaged in the same kinds of labor, and many more are entirely competent to perform such labor if allowed the opportunity. The clerkships of the men are divided into four classes. The lowest class, which is most absurdly styled the first, receive $1,200 per annum; the second, $1,400; the third, $1,600; the fourth, $1,800, while the salary of a chief clerk is $2,000 and upward. Before receiving his appointment the man is required to pass an examination in regard to his fitness for the work in which he is to be employed—an ordeal generally much dreaded by applicants—though occasionally, through a press of political influence, it is made very easy. Women clerks, on the contrary are not examined as regards fitness for the work required of them, nor have they ever been admitted into either of the four grades of clerkships which the Department comprises, as far as I can ascertain, with but one exception. More than twenty years ago, during President POLK's Administration, a distinguished Polish lady, Miss APOLLONIA YAGIELLO, who had formerly served as an officer in the Polish war, was appointed to a regular clerkship of the second grade, with a salary of $1,400 per annum. Twenty years ago this salary stood for about twice the amount of bread, comfort and luxury that it does now, and Miss YAGIELLO divided it with a man who, for $600 per annum, performed her work in the Department. She cannot, therefore, be said to have been a bona fide clerk, since she did not enter the Department to labor; but the circumstance might surely be considered as a precedent for the appointment of women to the grade of clerkships. This appointment of distinguished foreigner was probably occasioned and justified by the enthusiasm for the cause of Polish liberty then so universal. But it should be remembered that there are now actually at work in the Departments women who have performed an honorable part in our own war for liberty. Women who have given to their country's cause sons husbands and fathers, have done more for her than fight. Many of these women are now performing the same grade of work at $900 per annum for which men receive $1,800. Most of them, too, have families to support; being, nearly all, either widows or orphans made by the war; and any person who has kept house in Washington can appreciate the poverty and hardship a family must suffer, attempting to live respectably on so small an income. At year or more ago, Secretary MCCULLOCH stated, in conversation with a lady, that he had in his office in the Treasury Department three women clerks who performed as much labor, and performed it as well, as any three men clerks receiving $1,800 salary. "Why, then, do you not pay them the same?" inquired the lady. The Secretary replied that he should like very much to do so, but that "public opinion would not justify him, even if the laws permitted." Surely heads of Departments must be much more conscientious now than they were twenty years ago, much more careful to act in all cases strictly upon authority. Or is it the will to do justice more than the power, which has hitherto been wanting? Officers of the Departments who really wish to do justice to the women clerks may find sufficient encouragement, however cautious they may be in doing right, from the resolution which passed the House a month ago, introduced by Mr. JONES, of Kentucky, declaring that women in the Departments who perform the same work as men should receive the same pay. The vote by which this resolution passed—123 to 27—ought to satisfy any reasonable person that the voice of the people is for justice.

Soon after the passage of this resolution about fifty of the 100 or more women clerks who were discharged some months since for want of work were reinstated and detailed for duty in the Third Auditor's office, in the Quartermaster's Division, where they were set to work on Quartermaster's accounts, under the immediate supervision of Messrs. A. A. SHISSLER, S. C. STERNES and THOMAS B. FLORENCE SPANGLER, nephew and namesake of the immortal Col. THOMAS B. FLORENCE, so lately resurrected. Mr. SHISSLER, in his report to the Chief of the Division, says:

"The ladies assigned to me for instruction in the settlement of accounts are progressing beyond the most sanguine expectations."

He also says:

"They show a great amount of energy and industry, and possess all the qualifications to make them most efficient clerks, and certainly equal to the male clerks employed upon the same work."

It might be supposed, in view of the House resolution referred to, that they are to receive equal pay to the men clerks employed upon the same work, but as far as I can learn, no one of these fifty women has the least hope of receiving more than the usual $900 per annum. Before justice can be done the women clerks, it will probably be necessary for Congress to pass a joint resolution providing authoritatively that women employed in the Government Departments shall receive equal pay with men so employed, when equal work is performed. It is understood that Judge WM. LAWRENCE, Representative from Ohio, has prepared a resolution to that effect, and is now awaiting opportunity to introduce it. During the past year every Senator and member of Congress has been conversed with individually in regard to this question by a self-appointed committee of two strong-minded women, who, by the way, may possibly have been the fish women, whom "Olivia," the correspondent of the Washington Chronicle, in her late controversy with Grace Greenwood, through the columns of that paper, speaks of having seen "in the flesh, clamoring at the doors of Congress." But whether they clamored or not at the doors, they report having been treated with the greatest politeness by our Representatives, nine-tenths of whom assured them that they would vote for any bill which would secure the desired result.

The influence of Mr. Treasurer SPINNER, under whose immediate supervision a large proportion of the women employed in the Treasury Department are, has for years been exerted in favor of securing a more just payment of this class of Government employes, and if they ever obtain justice they will have to thank him for it more than any other man. In every one of his annual reports for the past five or six years, he has not failed to call attention to the subject. In that of October, 1866, he says:

"The experiment of employing women as clerks has been, so far as this office is concerned, a success. For many kinds of office work, like the manipulating and counting of fractional currency, they excel, and in my opinion are to be preferred to men. Some of them incur great risks, being responsible for mistakes in count, and for counterfeits overlooked. Such should, in every consideration of justice and fair dealing, be paid according to their merits, and the risks and liabilities they incur."

The Treasurer further states that some of the women in his employ have sometimes lost more than half their month's pay by reason of being short in count, or of allowing counterfeit notes to pass their hands; and he earnestly protests against the injustice which imposes such responsible employment on clerks who are paid so little.

It is also owing to Mr. SPINNER, more than to any other man, that this department of labor is now open in any degree to women. At his request the first woman clerk was employed in 1861, in cutting and trimming the notes—a work now performed altogether by machinery. Gradually they found their way into other and more difficult branches of the work, but for the space of five years their appointments were considered to be merely temporary, and their pay was limited to $60 per month, or just one-half the lowest salary paid to any man clerk. In the General Appropriation bill of July 23, 1866, they were for the first time recognized as clerks and their salary fixed at $900 per annum. In addition to the five hundred regular women clerks engaged in the Treasury Department, the Currency Printing Bureau of that establishment employs about fifty women as laborers, at a salary of $60 per month.

Of the seven Executive Departments of our Government, viz.: The Treasury, State, War, Interior, Post Office, and the Attorney-General's Office, with their six thousand or more clerkships, consuming not less than $9,000,000 annually for clerk hire, only three, the Treasury, Post Office and War Departments, employ women as regular clerks, nearly all of whom are employed in the Treasury Department. The War Department employs only about thirty women, widows of soldiers, in copying accounts, the same grade of work which is performed by a majority of the men clerks in all the Departments.

The Post Office Department employs fifty women in the Dead Letter Office in redirecting the letters, which are first opened by men, who for this merely mechanical work receive salaries of the first and some even of the second grade. The letters must be opened by men because, as is said, immoral things are sometimes found in them. To see these things would, it is supposed, corrupt the morals of women. It is not argued, I believe, that man is stronger morally than woman, but rather that in doing this work he will be injured less than her, because he has less moral sentiment to be corrupted, or, in other words, the less strength persons have the less they are in danger of falling. This philosophy is not indorsed by Mr. ZEVERLY, the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, who has charge of the work. He believes that mature or elderly women could perform the labor referred to with perfect propriety, and with no danger whatever of demoralization; and I think he will be found quite ready to employ in it some of the widows and mothers of deceased soldiers, who are, many of them, seeking employment, as soon as he shall receive the necessary authority for so doing. Mr. ZEVERLY gives his opinion without hesitation that all the work in the Dead Letter Office can be performed entirely by women quite as well as it now is mainly by men.

The Patent Office of the Interior Department furnishes irregular work for about fifty women, which is sent to their homes by messengers of the Department. It consists, principally, in copying drafts of patents, for which they are paid at the rate of ten cents per hundred words. This work, of course, is required to be performed with the greatest accuracy, and many of these copyists are said to execute a very superior style of penmanship.

The Government printing office furnishes work of various kinds for about three hundred women. Forty-five are employed in managing the small presses, which print, blanks and other forms. The remainder are engaged in folding, trimming, stitching, and all the other various interesting processes through which a book has to pass before it is ready for the eye of the reader. They are, most of them, paid according to the amount of work they perform, being allowed forty per cent. more than is paid to women in similar establishments. Even with this liberal provision the wages earned by some of them is barely sufficient to support life, there being an inadequate supply of work. The pressure for employment is so great, and from women to whose histories and circumstances commend them to the profoundest sympathy, that Mr. DEFREES, the Superintendent, is obliged to divide the employment among them as best he can. Remarking upon the fact that no women are employed in the type-setting department, Mr. DEFREES expressed his readiness to employ them in this work as fast as any good women type-setters shall apply, and, better still, he stated that he would pay them the same for a thousand ems that he pays the men who now do the work. Here is a chance for two hundred good workwomen to make $24 per week. Mr. DEFREES states that he will employ them in preference to men as fast as they apply.

THE O'HARA MALPRACTICE CASE.

Continuation of the Inquest—The Accused Held to Bail.

Coroner FLYNN continued his investigation yesterday in the case of ELLEN O'HARA, whose death was caused through alleged malpractice on the part of Dr. JAMES WALKER. The following is the evidence adduced yesterday:

Mary Franklin testified: I reside at No. 38 South William-street, and deceased was my sister; at half-past nine o'clock on Friday evening I sent for Dr. Shine to attend deceased, who was then in labor; I did not see him, but was told he would come soon; he came about ten o'clock, and, after examining the patient, said she was well in true labor; he called twice; Dr. Good called afterward and said all was right, and he remained until Saturday morning, and visited her several times during the day; he gave her a prescription for powders for the purpose of putting the labor back; Dr. Walker came about eleven o'clock, and shortly after delivered the deceased with instruments; Dr. Good was not present; Dr. Walker visited deceased at eight o'clock on Sunday morning and deceased appeared to be doing well.

Patrick Lynch testified: I boarded with my sister, the deceased, at No. 36 South William-street; Dr. Good was attending her on Saturday, and made several visits; I saw him take four drinks; he said deceased would be delivered about midnight, and remarked that she could not be delivered without instruments; at half-past eleven o'clock I went for Dr. Walker, who soon arrived, and obtained permission of Dr. Good to examine the patient, who offered to lend him his spoons; Dr. Walker declined the offer, as he had his own instruments; Dr. Good left the house soon; I saw the child, and it was alive; deceased told me on Sunday that she was in true labor; Drs. Shine and Good came on Sunday afternoon, and Shine said he wanted to take deceased's ante-mortem statement, adding that he came as Deputy Coroner; I ordered him out of the room, and he returned with the Police Captain, but did not go up stairs; Coroner Flynn came also and conversed with deceased.

Dr. P. Henry Arnold testified: I made a post-mortem examination of the remains; on laying open the abdomen the wound was at once brought to view; I discovered a large laceration or opening behind it, on the posterior face of the uterus, on the left side and extended into the vagina, about two inches in diameter and very irregular; there were no signs of disease or inflamation in the abdomen; in my opinion death resulted from this laceration, which must have occurred at the post-mortem; recovery is possible, after such laceration, though not probable.

Samuel O'Hara, the husband of deceased, testified: On returning from work on Friday last, at five o'clock P. M., I found my wife about to be confined with her first child, and my sister-in-law told me that she had sent for Dr. Shine, of No. 20 Greenwich-street; I went for him at about seven o'clock, and asked the doctor to come with me and see my wife; he called and saw my wife, and said he would be back again at ten o'clock; he was sent for before ten o'clock, but he was not in; not finding him in his office, I left word that I would get another physician if he didn't come in fifteen minutes; I saw Dr. Shine at ten minutes to ten o'clock, and he told me to get another physician if I liked; I then went for Dr. Walker, but he was indisposed, and I then summoned Dr. Good, who remained all night, sleeping on the lounge; he returned the next day; early in the morning I sent for Dr. Walker; Drs. Good and Walker had some conversation; Dr. Good remarked, "It was rather soon yet;" Dr. Walker said it was a serious case, and the sooner she was delivered the better; Dr. Good said to Dr. Walker, "There are my 'spoons,' you can use them;" Dr. Walker replied that he had brought his own instruments; Dr. Good then put on his hat and coat, and remarked that it was too cool of Dr. Walker not to invite him into the room; he then took up his instruments, which had lain on the table all day, and left the room; he went out for about an hour, and when I returned found that my wife had been delivered of a son and both were living; they both did well until Sunday morning when I called Dr. Walker, who prescribed for my wife; at half-past one o'clock Drs. Good and Shine came into the room and said they wished to hold an inquest; Dr. Shine asked me how my wife was, and I told him she was getting on well; my brother-in-law then ordered them out of the room; Dr. Shine left and said he would obtain the aid of the police; Coroner Flynn, Dr. Shine and several officers came in subsequently; I sent for Dr. Walker; the child died at about half-past six o'clock on Sunday evening, and my wife died at eight o'clock the same evening.

The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the said woman came to her death by ruptures of the uterus, caused by Dr. JAMES WALKER. We further consider him deserving of censure in acting too hastily in using said instruments." The Coroner announced that he will hold the accused to await the action of the Grand Jury, and admitted him to bail in the sum of $2,500.

Fire Commissioners.

At a meeting of the Fire Commissioners yesterday, the following communication was directed to be sent to the Board of Health:

This Board would respectfully state that under the regulations established relative to the transportation, keeping, storage and use of combustible material in this City, one man is detailed from each Fire Company and assigned to the duty of making constant and thorough examination within their respective districts to which they are assigned, for the discovery of explosive and dangerous combustibles, such as nitro-glycerine, with instructions to forthwith report to this Board the discovery of any such material when kept or consigned in a manner contrary to law, or in excess of the quantity authorized thereby, and upon making such discovery the officers of the Department are directed to exercise the greatest possible vigilance and celerity in taking such immediate steps in the premises as may be necessary for the protection of life and property, in causing the removal of such material to a place of safety remote from the City, a proper officer being detailed by the Board of Police for that purpose, and in and about the removal of such material the officers having charge are instructed to take every possible precaution to prevent danger and accident. Upon investigation, complaint or discovery of nitro-glycerine or other dangerous explosives by or through any source, immediate action is taken by the Board and its officers to enforce the law and protect the public. The Board respectfully invites the cooperation in this behalf of the Board of Health and all other public authorities in this City and elsewhere interested in protecting the public from the hazards and danger of those explosive materials; and the Commissioners respectfully call the attention of all public authorities throughout the country to the importance of this subject matter.

The Board then adjourned.

Columbia College—Semi-Annual.

The students of Columbia College gave their semi-annual exhibition at the French Theatre yesterday. The house was well filled with an audience consisting mainly of highly appreciative young ladies, who showered the speakers with flowers and showed an unwonted interest in the abstruse subjects presented by the undergraduate philosophers. What with the wisdom of the speeches and the gracefulness of the scholastic gowns and caps, every young lady must have come to the conclusion that students are very intelligent and very nice. It was a very pleasant occasion, for nothing was left undone to make it agreeable. The addresses were, as a rule, bright, the music was charming, and the place itself was admirably adapted to the purpose.

The programme was as follows, the music being under the direction of C. S. GRAFULLA.:

Overture, "Light Cavalry," Suppe; March; Prayer, by Rev. C. R. Duffie, S. T. D.; Prayer, "Martha," Flotow; President's Address, by Robt. Lenox Belknap; Selections, "Genevieve," Offenbach; The Last of the Vivandieres, William Bartlett; Aria, "Thoughts of Home," Grafulla; The Banner in the Sky, H. N. Seaver, Jr.; March, "Victoria," C. Faust; Fall of Carthage, Edmund Kelly; Waltz, "Wiener Bonbon," Strauss; Coasts of the Mediterranean, Charles M. Garth; Galop, "Grand Duchess," Offenbach; Drama of Life, Henry M. Smith; Song, "I think of thee," Abt; Habits, R. B. Kelly; Waltz, "Les Favorites," Lanner; Rise and Fall of Chivalry, Valentine Mott; Selections, "Barbe Bleue," Offenbach; National Stability, Robert H. Wilkinson; Galop, "Federbail," C. Faust; Philolexian Oration, J. B. Barnes; Barcalora, "Don Sebastiano," Donizetti; Feithologian Oration, Wm. Fanning, Jr.; Galop, "Hurly Burly," Grafulla; March, "Tannhauser," Wagner; Benediction; Pot Pourri, "College Airs."

The Driving and Slaughtering of Cattle.

The following order was issued yesterday:

The Mayor's first Marshal yesterday inflicted penalties in sums ranging from $1 to $5 upon the owners and drivers of several carts and trucks, for not having their names and places of business properly painted upon the same.

MR. JOHN A. KERNOCHAN, residing at No. 18 East Tenth-street, complained that the driver of coach No. 405 was engaged by him to take him to his residence on last Wednesday night, this being the occasion of the Lichtenanz Ball at the Academy of Music, at which the complainant was present, and upon the conclusion of the same the defendant was engaged by the complainant to take him home. After getting inside of the coach, the driver, finding that he had only one passenger instead of four, he, as alleged, refused to take the complainant home, but drove up into the corner of Nineteenth-street and Broadway, and there refused to go any further, and upon being ordered to take Mr. KERNOCHAN home, the defendant became very abusive toward him. The defendant was then arrested and brought before the Marshal, who fined him $5.

Shooting Affray.

Yesterday JAMES BENNETT, of No. 341 West Fifty-fourth-street, made a complaint before Justice DODGE, stating that while passing Wooster-street he met JAMES D. DUFFY, alias Duff, who had in his hand a revolver, which BENNETT recognized as his property, and demanded it from DUFFY. By way of reply, the latter, it is alleged, took deliberate aim at BENNETT, and discharged one barrel of the weapon, but without effect. DUFFY then fled through Bleecker-street pursued by BENNETT and Officer HUTCHINSON, of the Eighth Precinct, and was captured in Thompson-street. The prisoner, when arraigned, stated that the pistol had been given him to pawn, and finding it loaded he had only been engaged in emptying the barrels into the gutter, and that he had not fired at BENNETT. He was, however, held for trial at the General Sessions.

Capture of an Alleged Burglar.

During the night of the 16th of December last the cellar door of the premises of SIMON M. SCHULHOFER, No. 145 Attorney-street, was forced open by two men, who stole from the cellar three geese and three ducks, valued at $15. Officer BERGHOLF intercepted the two men when they were leaving, and arrested one calling himself GEORGE SMITH, who was in the possession. The other man escaped at the time, but on Monday evening the officer arrested one PETER MILLER, who is charged with being the partner in the crime. The accused denied all knowledge of the burglary, but was committed in default of $1,500 bail, by Justice LEDWITH.

Board of Aldermen.

This Board met at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the President, THOMAS COMAN, Esq., in the chair. The Board concurred with the Board of Assistant Aldermen in a resolution directing that the actual opening of Church-street shall take place March 1. A large number of papers were received from the other Board, chiefly of an unimportant character, and the same were ordered to be laid over under the rules. A resolution directing the Corporation Counsel to take the necessary legal measures to widen and extend Washington-place, from Broadway to Fourth-avenue, was ordered to be laid over.

The Board then adjourned.

Lecture upon Thomas Jefferson.

A lecture was delivered last night at Lebanon Hall, by MR. JAMES W. GERARD, JR., upon THOMAS JEFFERSON. MR. GERARD reviewed intelligently the condition of political parties in this country after the acknowledgment of its independence by Great Britain, sketched the causes of the birth of the Democratic Party in opposition to the old Federal Party, and detailed the agency MR. JEFFERSON in its formation. WASHINGTON, HAMILTON, ADAMS, BURR, and other prominent characters of the period, were touched upon, and the character and genius of JEFFERSON, with his influence upon modern politics, were brought out in effective relief.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

PATENT—REISSUE—EXTENSION—CONFORMITY TO ACT OF CONGRESS AUTHORIZING IT—ABANDONMENT.

Agawam Woolen Company vs. Eben D. Jordan.—This is an action to recover for infringements of letters patent, granted to one John Goulding in December, 1826, for an "improvement in the mode of manufacturing wool and other fibrous material." The action was brought in the Circuit Court for the District of Massachusetts. The original patent was surrendered and reissued in July, 1836, and expired again in 1840. On the 3d of August, 1867, the Commissioner of Patents, under the authority of an act of Congress, passed in May of that year, "for the relief of John Goulding," renewed and extended the patent for seven years, subject to certain conditions and limitations prescribed by the act. In June, 1864, Jordan acquired title to it, and surrendered it and obtained the letters in his own name; and it is the patent thus held by him which it is alleged has been infringed by the plaintiffs here. The defence is that the infringements covered by this patent were first invented by Edward Winslow, and were not original with Goulding; and that at the time of Goulding's application for a renewal the invention had been on sale and in use, with his consent, for more than two years, and that he abandoned it to the public. It is also set up that the reissued letters of 1864 are not in conformity with the act of 1861, for the relief of Goulding, not containing the limitations or conditions of the extended patent for his benefit; and it is claimed that they are, therefore, void. It is further claimed that the machinery of the Agawam Company having been in use before and at the time of the granting of the reissue in 1864, is within the saving clause of the act of 1861. Nearly a half century has passed since the original invention, and nearly all who were then interested in it are dead, and have been for many years; but all who are living were examined in the case when, on a bill below, as to the question of the real inventor. The case went against the Company below, and they now come here insisting upon the same points made below, and arguing at great length to sustain them. Having thus a suit of the kind been heard, has been shown in the case, before application for a patent, it is maintained that this works a forfeiture of the inventions described in the patent, in respect of particular claims, and, therefore, of the patent altogether, as an abandonment to the public; for under the patent acts of 1793 and 1836, if a patent was void in part, it was void in toto, and it is not pretended the statute giving the right to recover if a part of the invention is new and can be distinguished from that claimed without right. This statute, however, does not apply to the case of an attempt to reclaim that which has once been abandoned to the public. The act of Congress for the relief of Goulding, under whom Jordan claims, authorized the Commissioner of Patents to grant the extension "provided the renewal and extension shall not have the effect to restrain persons who may be using the machine invented by Goulding at the time of the renewal and extension, not subject to any damage for having used it." This limitation, made expressly to protect parties in the position of the Agawam Company, does not appear in the grant, as was intended by Congress, and this letters are for that reason void. It is not only provided that the extension shall not have the effect to restrain persons then using the machinery, but that it "shall not be so construed." By the reference to Jordan the protection is afforded to an extensive interest, and a numerous class whom it was the intention of Congress should be exempted from its operation. It is submitted that it is no answer to say they have the privilege given by the act; it was never intended to make it incumbent on them to appeal to the Courts. This is a private statute; and no one entitled to the benefit of the proviso would ever learn it from any suggestion contained in the patent. But this suit ought not to be maintained, because the plaintiff has a plain, adequate and complete remedy at law. He is only entitled to recover an established fee for the use of the invention, and not any part of the profits.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—SOUTHERN DISTRICT.

IN ADMIRALTY—RESPONSIBILITY FOR LEAKAGES.

Jacob Wolf and Alexander Wolf vs. The Bark Olbers, Her Boats, &c.—BLATCHFORD, J.—This is a libel to recover the sum of $489 as, the value of the wine contained in a cask shipped on the bark Olbers, at Rotterdam, on the 3d of November, 1865, by C. Hemmann & Co., consigned to the libelants at New-York. The shipment was made under a bill of lading signed by the master of the vessel. The bill of lading covered twenty-six casks in all. It contained a statement that the wine was shipped "in good order and well conditioned," and contracted for the delivery of it "in the like good order and well-conditioned, all and every dangers and accidents of the seas and navigation, of whatsoever nature or kind, excepted." Upon the face of the bill of lading the following words were separately impressed by a stamp: "Not accountable for leakage, breakage, rust or corruption." The libel alleges that the master failed to deliver to the libelants the wine in one of the casks, although no danger or accident of the seas or navigation prevented, and that through the negligence of those in charge of the vessel, while the wine in such casks were in the keeping of the vessel and her master, a hole was pierced in the head of the cask near the chime thereof, with an instrument unknown to the libelants, and all of the wine was taken out of the cask, and no part of it was ever delivered to the libelants. The answer admits that the cask was delivered to the master of the vessel in apparent good order as to its external condition, and sets up that by the bill of lading the vessel was not to be accountable for any loss arising from leakage or corruption; that the cask was delivered to the libelants at New-York, to all external appearance, in the same condition in which it was received by the vessel; that any loss or abstraction of the contents which occurred happened before it came on board of the vessel, or after its delivery thereirom; that during the voyage the vessel met with severe storms; that if the contents of the cask were lost, the loss was caused by the perils of the sea, and by reason of the cask being defective and imperfect and not sufficiently strong to withstand the voyage; that by usage and custom in regard to such merchandise, the vessel is not accountable for leakage under such circumstances. There is no satisfactory evidence that the loss of the wine was occasioned by any danger or accident of the seas or of navigation. The only other exception in the bill of lading on which the claimants can rely to shield the vessel from responsibility, is the provision that the vessel shall not be accountable for leakage. In this connection the answer was that the cask was defective and imperfect. The averment in the bill of lading that the property was in good order and well conditioned, so far as it is applicable to the cask, extends only to the apparent external condition of the cask, excluding any implication as to its internal soundness and sufficiency. (Clark vs take the notes, and when making such agreement he had information that the maker had failed. Notwithstanding such knowledge he accepted their transfer to him on the following day, but without payment of any consideration therefor. Subsequently the parties from whom plaintiff received the notes signed a compromise paper in favor of defendant, but excluding the noted held by plaintiff. Subsequent payment of the full value of the notes was proved by plaintiff, and on this state of facts the Court decided that there was no question of fact to go to the jury, and directed them to find in favor of the plaintiff in the sum of $1,797 81. Counsel for defendant excepted to the decision, and the Court noted the exception. Twenty days were granted defendants to prepare a case; the argument to be heard in the first instance at General Term, and proceedings be stayed in the mean time.

A FUSEL OIL CONTROVERSY.

Leonard Monzart vs. Horace Webster et al.—This was an action for $2,000, arising out of the following circumstances: The plaintiff alleged an agreement between him and defendants whereby he, plaintiff, was to receive $30 per week from defendants in the capacity of rectifier, with the additional understanding that if plaintiff gave defendants the benefit of certain improvements in the method of rectifying liquors they should retain him in their service one year, and if discharged before, they would pay the full value of the improvements. They discharged him before the expiration of the year, and he now brings action for the value of those improvements, fixing them at $2,000—and also claims $600 for the balance of the year's services. The agreement as stated by the plaintiff was denied by defendants, who claimed that the pretended improvements were the inducements to the engagement, that the improvements were a failure, and the plaintiff as a rectifier was a failure, and hence his discharge. The jury, after several hours' consultation, failing to agree, the Court directed a sealed verdict to be brought in, and adjourned until to-morrow.

Solomon B. Noble for plaintiff; W. L. Flagg for defendant.s

COURT OF OYER AND TERMINER—FEB. 17.

Before Judge Barnard.

BAILING OF LOGAN NO. 1.

Mr. John Townsend, counsel for James Logan No. 1, who surrendered himself in response to the proclamation of Mayor Hall, in the early pursuit of the Rogers murderer, appeared in Court, and inquired of his Honor Judge BARNARD, if any decision had been reached in reference to his client's discharge.

Judge BARNARD remarking in reply that the letter of counsel received by him had been handed to the District-Attorney, Mr. Townsend said that the letter must have related to Logan No. 2, as he (counsel) had written no such letter in relation to his client. Judge Barnard stated that he understood the only delay in the discharge of the prisoner had grown out of some question of etiquette between counsel. To which Mr. Townsend replied that there was no etiquette in the matter so far as he was concerned, but he simply demanded a formal honorable discharge of his client, and not that he be merely turned loose in Mercer-street. There being in the judgment of the Court no grounds for his further detention, the Court ordered that he be discharged from custody on giving his own recognizance in the sum of $1,000.

HOMICIDE.

The case of Donato Migaldo, charged with homicide, was called up for trial. Mr. McCarthy, counsel for the prisoner, appeared in Court and asked for an adjournment of the trial until Monday next, owing to an engagement in the McHenry perjury case already in progress before Judge Benedict in the United States District Court.

Judge BARNARD said he overruled the motion, and ordered a jury to be called. While the jury was being called, Mr. McCarthy again said that he was not ready against the proceedings. The indictment had been found in August last, and at every succeeding term of this Court and the Court of General Sessions his client in Court said he was prepared to go on with the case. He was the only counsel the prisoner had, had consulted with him frequently in the case, and, in justice to the man, he accused to now force him to trial without the aid of his counsel.

The District-Attorney said that under these circumstances he did not wish to press the case to trial, but suggested that it might be arranged to try it to-morrow morning.

Mr. McCarthy said he could not possibly be ready to try the case before Monday morning, and after some discussion between him and the Court, as to the fact of his having announced his readiness to proceed at former terms, the Court distinctly objected receiving such announcement having been made before him, the trial was ordered to stand over until Monday morning.

A other case being ready for trial the jurors were discharged until to-morrow morning, and the Court adjourned.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—FEB. 17.

Before Judge Curtis and a Jury.

ASSAULT OF A SEA CAPTAIN ON A CABIN BOY.

Benjamin Phillips vs. Wm. S. Gibson.—This action was brought to recover damages for assault and battery. The defendant was Captain of the vessel Neversink, and the plaintiff, a colored lad, was cabin boy on the same craft. The latter testified that, without any provocation, the Captain beat him severely with the halyards, and afterward with a marline stuff; that in consequence of the beating he was very much injured. The captain, having been put upon the stand, testified that he had abundant cause for flogging the lad, which, by the way, he admitted was very little. The case was submitted to the jury by Judge CURTIS in an able charge, during which he paid a high compliment to the address of the plaintiff, whom he characterized as a bright, intelligent and apparently truthful witness.

After a brief consultation the jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff for $50, to which the Court added an allowance by way of costs.

For plaintiff, Mr. S. N. Wheelright: for the defendant, Mr. H. Andrews.

SURROGATE'S COURT.

Before Hon. Gideon J. Tucker.

WILL OF ROBERT WATSON.

This is the case of a will which, having already been admitted to probate in due form, is under the statute contested on allegations, the probate being opened for the purpose.

The testator was the well-known Robert Watson, the public waiter. In his will he leaves his property to his family residing in this City, making no mention of absent children, who is seeking to set aside the probate, alleges that she is the lawful widow of the decedent, having been married to him many years ago before his marriage with his present wife. Proponents deny that petitioner is the widow of decedent. The trial was commenced a few days since, and on the first hearing the following testimony was elicited.

Joshua Coit testified that he drew the will in question; that he was a lawyer; that he had known Robert Watson, the deceased, as a waiter in the family of Peletiah Perit, the brother-in-law of witness, in 1832, and had known him from that time until his death; the witness was one of the subscribing witnesses to the will.

Joseph Mohrman, the other subscribing witness, was examined as to the execution.

The counsel for the will having made formal proof of its due execution, rested, and the counsel for contestants called Polly Watson, who testified that she had married Robert Watson, many years ago, in Virginia; that until the past three years she had lived in Virginia; that she had always been a slave; that last Summer, on hearing of the death of Robert Watson, she went to Green-Wood, saw his body, and recognized it as that of her husband; that she also recognized Mrs. Watson as a scar on his knee, where he had cut himself with a drawing-knife. On the cross-examination she testified in regard to her family; gave the names and ages of her children, the youngest of which, Albert, was about 20 years old; he having been born when her husband was sold South. She testified that her husband was a right tall, common-sized man, a broad-shouldered man, and a man that would weigh 200 pounds for himself.

Hiram F. Graves testified that he was present at the time Polly Watson saw the body of Robert Watson, and that she recognized it as being that of her husband; that prior to the opening of the coffin she had described to him the scar on the right knee; that he saw the scar.

Albert Watson testified that he was a son of Polly Watson; that he never saw his father, but that he knew it was Robert Watson. Witness said he would be about thirty years old in March coming; that he was present when his mother identified the body of decedent, as before mentioned. On the cross-examination witness said he knew his age because it was the same as that of Becky N. Holliday, one of his young mistresses, and that she had told him what it was.

On the hearing yesterday the contestants produced the following testimony: James M. Scott testified that he resided in Virginia; that he knew a colored man called Major Watson; that he sold him at Fredericksburg in November, 1833; that Major Watson was the husband of Polly Watson, and the father of Albert Watson. On the cross-examination he testified that Major Watson was about five feet nine or ten inches tall.

Nat. Johnson, the colored preacher, who married Major and Polly Watson, was examined.

James Watson testified that he was a brother of the Major, and that the Major was sold South about twenty-five or thirty years ago, since which time he had not seen or heard from him. Witness further said he was five feet nine, and that his brother Robert was a little taller than he.

Elizabeth Corsey testified that she had known Robert Watson in New-York, when he resided at Mr. Perit's, in Franklin-street; that Robert told her that he had a wife named Polly Irving, but that he could not get her. She described Robert Watson as being a small-sized man.

Contestants then rested, and proponents called Maria Perit, the widow of Peletiah Perit, who testified that she first knew Robert Watson in 1825; that he was a waiter in their family, and that she had known him ever since in New-York.

Nathan B. Graham testified that he had known Robert Watson, the deceased, in New-York ever since 1830.

Calvin Durand testified that he was formerly a partner of Mr. Perit; that he resided in his family in 1823; that Robert was a waiter there then, and that he had known him ever since in this City.

Elizabeth G. Thompson, wife of Rev. Dr. Thompson, testified that she had known Robert Watson in this City since the Winter of 1852-4.

Eunice Watson testified that she had known Robert Watson forty-three years ago in New-York; that he was married to Catherine Day before he married her.

Sarah Dubois testified that she was 67 years of age; that she came to New-York when about eight years old; that she remembers when she was a girl seeing Robert Watson at the house on the corner of Pine-street and Broadway, and had known him in this City ever since; witness recollected the war of 1812, more particularly the close of it, when she saw a stage going through the street, the men crying "Peace!" through a trumpet, and throwing around the streets printed announcements that peace was declared.

The trial is adjourned until to-day.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hackett.

In the Court of General Sessions yesterday morning two trials were held resulting in one conviction and one acquittal. No sentences were pronounced, judgment being postponed in the conviction to allow the prisoner an opportunity to bring references as to character. A large number of pleadings were received and the days of trial appointed.

ACQUITTED.

Samuel Shaw, a gray-headed old man, pleaded not guilty to the charge of grand larceny, and received a trial. According to the evidence, Henry A. Wex, Jr., a cartman, had two tubs of butter stolen from his cart in front of No. 600 Grand-street on the 14th of December, 1868, which were subsequently found on the premises of the prisoner. The officer who arrested the prisoner stated that the prisoner told him the names of the men who stole the butter, and he arrested one of them, who was discharged for lack of any evidence against him.

The testimony of Mr. Joseph Wallace, a juror, was taken to the effect that the prisoner had borne a good character for seventeen years since he had known him.

The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoner was discharged.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY.

Wm. Jones, indicted with Francis Bradley for attempted burglary, pleading not guilty, received a trial. Officer Elder and Mr. Pearsall, a private watchman, both testified that on the night of the 17th of January, they found Jones and Bradley acting suspiciously in Hester-street. They saw the prisoners at the door of Levy's pawnbroker's office, No. 145 Hester-street. Officer Elder had also stated that he saw the prisoner in a hallway in Chrystie-street, acting suspiciously. The watchman took Bradley in charge, while officer Elder attempted to arrest Jones, who ran, and while running threw away a "jimmy," which was picked up afterward. Mr. Levy stated that he found the door of his store had been tampered with on examining it the morning after the night of the alleged attempted burglary.

The jury rendered a verdict of guilty, and judgment was postponed to allow the prisoner an opportunity to bring some testimony as to character, &c. The prisoner said he could account for his being in the hallway, and asserted that he was arrested because he differed with the officer in politics during the late City election. The prisoner Bradley will receive his trial at the next term of the Court. Owing to the absence of witnesses in several cases, the Court adjourned to 11 o'clock this morning.

POLICE TRIALS.

Twenty-five patrolmen answered to complaints in matters of discipline yesterday, before Commissioner BRENNAN.

EXCEEDED HIS AUTHORITY.

John J. McGill, patrolman, of the Fourth Precinct, was charged by Mrs. Mary Wood with grossly improper conduct. She testified that McGill, on a Saturday evening, about 8 o'clock, came to the premises where she was living, No. 121 Bleecker-street, and arrested her, compelling her to go to various places in the Bowery and Bleecker-street, to see if she could anywhere point out a man named Condon; finally he took her to the Fourth Ward Station-house, and preferred a charge, but Capt. Thorne said he could not detain her on it, and she was discharged and reached her residence about three hours after she had left with the officer.

Florence Temple, who gave her profession as that of actress, living also at No. 121 Bleecker-street, was present with Mrs. Wood, and testified that she ordered him out of the house; he opened the window and whistled for another officer; she shut it down; he opened it again and set in it and whistled; another officer McGill, then for the first time seen, who was in citizen's clothes, showed his shield; the other officer refused to have anything to do with the case. This was corroborated by another witness, Mrs. C. Moore, No. 147 West Thirtieth-street, who was visiting Miss Temple at the time.

Officer McGill's statement in defence was that about 7 o'clock on the evening in question, a woman came to him while on post and stated that his sister-in-law had been beaten by Mrs. Wood and John Condon; that she was lying dangerously ill at the time, having been confined to bed since receiving injuries by the beating; he got permission from his Sergeant to go to Mrs. McGill's, his sister-in-law; from there he went to Mrs. Wood's and brought her in the presence of Mrs. McGill, who recognized her as one who had beaten her; addressing her, she said, "Oh, Mrs. Wood, if you had ever been a mother you would never have done this; but I forgive you; but if you will go with Officer McGill and find Mr. Condon:" "she went down on her knees," continued defendant, and said, "for God's sake, Mrs. McGill, don't do anything to me;" she would go with McGill and find Condon, if possible, and they went, as complainant had stated, to a great many places. It did not appear that McGill had a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Wood, or that he saw any assault committed by her, and of course had no legal right to make the arrest; he justified himself only on the ground that the Courts were not open to procure a warrant to arrest Mrs. Wood, and that Mrs. Wood being in such physical condition as not to be able to appear and make a charge at the Station-house against Mrs. Wood, he had taken her there on his own responsibility. Mrs. Wood stated in answering the assault and denied having made any such admissions. From the tenor of the trial, it looked as though McGill would not be justified in his conduct by the Commissioners.

FIGHT BETWEEN A POLICEMAN AND A LAMP-LIGHTER.

Robert Conroy, No. 408 West Eighteenth-street, brought a charge of improper conduct against Policeman James Westerfield, of the Ninth Precinct. His story was that he was engaged in his business putting out street lamps between 5 and 6 o'clock in the morning, when the officer told him he was ahead of time. Junk replied that might be so, but if the officer had any charge to prefer to go to the gas company. Junk continued putting out his lights. Some words passed, and the officer struck him with the club. The officer said that he had frequently remonstrated with Junk for extinguishing his lights so early; that this morning he was thirty-five minutes ahead of time, and he cautioned him again about it; Junk replied with abuse, and finally shoved a stick he had in his hand on to the officer's nose; the officer put his hand on his club to arrest Junk for disorderly conduct; Junk struck him and the officer returned the blow; then by some means Junk threw him on his back in a puddle of water, got over him and had his stick raised in a position as though he was about to strike the officer, when spying Roundsman Curry and Officer Thompson, who were rushing to the rescue of their comrade, Junk threw his stick over a fence. Junk was discharged before a Magistrate. Decisions in cases are not made until a formal vote is taken upon the judgment in the Board.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A dispatch from Madrid says that an unsuccessful attempt was made on Tuesday to assassinate Gen. PRIM. Three arrests have been made in consequence.

BLISS and MASTERMAN, the attachés of the American Legation who were arrested in Paraguay by President LOPEZ, charged with conspiring against his Government, have arrived at Rio Janeiro, en route to Washington. It is supposed they will be held to await any charges that LOPEZ may make against them.

In the House of Commons, on Tuesday evening, Mr. DISRAELI expressed his regret that the ratification of the treaty with the United States had not been consummated. Mr. GLADSTONE assured him that the negotiations would be terminated in a manner satisfactory to both parties.

The announcement that EX-King FERDINAND, of Portugal, had consented to become a candidate for the Spanish throne is contradicted. Another expedition, consisting of 6,000 men, is to be sent from Spain forthwith, to put down the insurrection in Cuba.

CUBA.

Our dispatches from Cuba furnish a summary of events since Sunday last. From these we learn that the insurrection is rapidly spreading throughout the island. Havana itself is practically in a state of siege, although not officially declared so. Wherever the standard of revolt is raised, the insurrectionists are joined by large numbers of recruits. Those who do not join the rebels are forced to abandon their labors and seek safety within the Government strongholds. Many plantations have been entirely deserted by both owners and employes, and crops are spoiling for want of care. Captain-General DULCE has directed all arms in private hands to be turned over to the Government and has refused to recognize the American Consul as a diplomatic agent to protect the rights of American citizens. Some Americans have been arrested on political charges. Admiral HOFF of our navy, who is at Havana with his flagship, has promised to remove Americans to Key West in case their lives are in danger at Havana. A detachment of troops had a fight with some insurgents near Miguel-Buno, but did not succeed in dispersing them. The troops lost twenty men in killed and wounded. After the fight the town was burned by the soldiers.

CONGRESS.

The Senate yesterday, after considerable debate, agreed to the report of the Committee of Conference on the bill relating to the navy. It proposes a large reduction in the naval force and in the marine corps. The Committee on Public Buildings reported adversely on the bill to purchase a new site for an Executive Mansion. The Judiciary Committee submitted a resolution and report, declaring that the Amnesty Proclamation issued by the President on Christmas, was not authorized by the Constitution and laws. A resolution was adopted directing the Attorney-General to furnish a list of the names of persons convicted of violating the Revenue laws, the penalties attached to such convictions, and the number of pardons issued to such offenders. The message of the House asking for a Committee of Conference on the Suffrage amendment was taken up, and debated at great length. At length a motion to recede from the Senate amendments to the bill was agreed to. Debate then ensued upon a motion to agree to the House proposition, but this was rejected, yeas 31, nays 27. The amendment reported from the Judiciary Committee was then taken up, amid much confusion, and Mr. NYE spoke in opposition to it. The debate was continued till midnight, when the report of the Judiciary Committee was agreed to.

The House Committee on Elections submitted a report and resolution regarding the contested seat of the Second Congressional District of Louisiana, declaring that neither SIMON JONES, J. W. MENARD, (colored,) nor CALEB S. HUNT were entitled to the seat. The report was laid on the table. The House then took up the bill supplementary to the National Banking laws. The previous question having been moved and seconded on the preceding day, Mr. POMEROY had the close of the debate, but yielded a portion of his time to Mr. POLAND, who spoke in favor of the amendment offered by him. Mr. BUTLER also spoke in favor of his amendment. Several other members spoke, after which the House voted on the several amendments. The amendment offered by Mr. COBURN as a substitute for the fourth section, for the issue of circulating notes to banking associations, organized in States and Territories, having less than their pro rata banking circulations, was adopted—yeas 94, nays 86. Some other modifications of the bill were agreed to, after which the bill and all its amendments was laid on the table, by a vote of yeas 92, nays 78. A recess until evening was then taken, and in the evening session the Army Appropriation bill was considered in Committee of the Whole, the question being upon Mr. BUTLER'S amendment providing for the reduction of the army. Mr. BUTLER explained and spoke in favor of his proposition. Without disposing of the bill, the Committee rose, and the House adjourned.

GENERAL.

The charter election in Syracuse on Tuesday resulted in a sweeping Republican triumph. The entire ticket was elected by about 500 majority—an increase of 300 over the majority last Spring. Six of the eight Aldermen elected are Republicans. The First, Second and Third Wards, which have generally gone Democratic, elected Republican Aldermen, while the Fifth and Seventh, usually Republican, elected Democratic Aldermen.

The Kansas Senate yesterday rejected the proposition to strike the word "white" from the State Constitution. The vote was yeas 14, nays 17, three Senators voting in the negative, because the bill did not also strike out the word male.

The Kiowa Indians have all come in to the reservation at the Washita Mountains, in accordance with the demands of Gen. SHERIDAN. The Cheyennes and Arapahoes are marching to the same point, and it is expected that these three belligerent tribes will speedily be peacefully located on the lands set apart for them.

In November last, a freight train on the Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroad was going up a steep grade when a coupling broke, and three or four of the rear cars commenced to descend the grade at a frightful rate. The brakeman of the rear car became alarmed, and instead of applying the brake leaped from the car. The cars ran back until they came in collision with another train, whereby several persons were killed. HAMILTON, the brakeman, has just been convicted under the laws of Pennsylvania of neglect of duty, and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for thirteen months.

The North Carolina State Auditor, Mr. ADAMS, has been committed to jail at Raleigh for having refused to obey an order of the Supreme Court directing him to remove his papers from the Clerk's office.

A meeting of prominent manufacturers and miners was held in Philadelphia yesterday, and it was resolved to organize a National League for the protection of our manufacturers.

A Washington correspondent says that the only large payments to be made from the Treasury this month are on pension accounts, and that the receipts will reduce the public debt about $10,000,000. On the first of next month there will be paid $4,500,000 interest on ten-forties. This will be the only heavy payment out of the Treasury until the first of May.

There is to be a reunion of naval officers formerly belonging to the Mississippi Squadron, at Cairo, Ill., to-day.

JOHN W. LEE, a respectable citizen of Lexington, Ky., on Monday last, while temporarily deranged, cut the throat of his wife with a razor and then cut his own throat. Both are dead. Mr. LEE had been sick for a long time.

The Nebraska Senate yesterday passed the House bill giving twenty thousand acres of land for the construction of every mile of railroad track within the State boundaries.

The steamship City of New-York, from Liverpool, at this port, reports passing the steamers Russia and City of Paris, hence for Liverpool, the Russia being four miles ahead.

In the alleged malpractice, in the case of Mrs. ELLEN O'HARA, Dr. JAMES WALKER has been held to bail in the sum of $2,500.

JAMES LOGAN, No. 1, was yesterday released from prison on $1,000 bail.

A youth named THOMAS LAFON, son of one of the most respectable citizens of Newark, N. J., was sentenced yesterday to one year's imprisonment and a fine of $500 for the accidental killing of a man who was beating his, LAFON'S, brother.

Cotton was in light demand at easier prices yesterday. Breadstuffs were unsettled on a moderate trade. Provisions and Groceries were in good request and quoted buoyant. The Freight engagements were limited.

Financial Questions in Congress.

There is confessedly no probability of enacting Mr. SHERMAN'S financial scheme; the only danger is, that it will be made an occasion for wasting the time of the Senate, and a pretext for obstructing and defeating some of the really desirable reforms which have been sanctioned by the House.

The loss of Mr. SHERMAN'S bill few will regret. It is an attempt to precipitate resumption against the wishes and interests of the great body of the people, and its effect would be to make a bad condition of affairs infinitely worse. It is a revival of the policy of contraction, which Mr. MCCULLOCH abandoned under compulsion, and its whole scope and design are favorable to those who are already abundantly cared for by the Government. The evils long complained of in regard to the Secretary's power to interfere in the concerns of Wall-street, it would perpetuate, in defiance of the expressed opinions of the mercantile and moneyed community. A measure so pregnant with mischief, so utterly unsuited to the convictions and requirements of the time, ought not to be allowed to block the path of more useful bills. Mr. SHERMAN can have no expectation of its passage, and every hour employed in its discussion is an hour thrown away.

Nor is any other general measure likely to take its place. The influences concentrated upon Mr. SHERMAN'S plan are not strong enough to carry it through, but they may be able to prevent the adoption of any bill not conceived in their behalf. For this reason, we apprehend that no progress will be made with the scheme presented by Mr. MORTON, who has caught the right idea of preparation for resumption through the Treasury accumulation of specie, but spoils its practical operation by fixing the date at which resumption shall commence.

The session will almost certainly close, then, without any legislation on the general question of finance—a circumstance much less to be regretted than would be the enactment of any measure with currency contraction as its starting point, and vast discretionary power in the hands of the Secretary as one of its characteristics. The present condition of affairs is not satisfactory, but it is at least tolerable. Time will bring more relief than any device like that on which Mr. SHERMAN places his main reliance. We may be all the more readily reconciled to natural remedies now that the Supreme Court, by recognizing the validity of gold contracts, has cleared the path for business on a specie basis. We are henceforth free to choose between obligations in currency and obligations in coin, and a gradual approach to a greater fixedness of values may therefore be anticipated. With this advantage gained, there will be no harm in waiting yet a while for general resumption.

The series of measures passed by the House on Saturday have merits of their own, apart from the general question. They relate to practical matters about which, among honest men, there is little difference of opinion; and they are called for by an experience which has been too costly and discreditable to be long neglected. The bill prohibiting the further increase of the public debt, prescribing more specifically the details of the periodical debt-statements, enjoining upon the Treasury the performance of its own work and forbidding secret sales of gold and bonds, is intended to remove a great scandal. The Secretary must, undoubtedly, have some latitude of action, but it should not be allowed to extend to these concerns. It is notorious that the present statement of the debt withholds information that ought to be made public, and equally notorious that under Mr. MCCULLOCH'S manipulation of the debt, its burden has been rendered more grievous. So again with reference to the manner in which transfers and sales of bonds and gold have been conducted. They have given rise to not unreasonable suspicion, and have been as costly as they have been injurious. For these errors of omission and commission Mr. HOOPER has effectually provided; and the responsibility of delaying or defeating his reform rests with the Senate.

The bills connected with National Bank management are also important. The report of the Comptroller of the Currency portrayed with striking effect the mischief and danger of the present system of certifying checks and playing the game of gamblers by locking up greenbacks. He showed that unscrupulous combinations may, with the help of banks, produce at will the worst features of sudden inflation and contraction; and that the only remedy is to be found in limiting certificates to the sums at the credit of the parties drawing checks, and in making it an offence to loan money on currency as collateral security. These points are covered by measures prepared by the House Committee on Banking and Currency, and the Senate has acted on both with uncommon promptitude. The bill prohibiting loans on legal-tender notes as collaterals was passed by the latter body on Tuesday, and the one regulating the certification of checks was reported from the Finance Committee with every prospect of an early passage. Their joint effect will be to arrest gross forms of the demoralization which disgraces Wall-street; and if, in addition, the Senate concur in the measure drafted and carried by Mr. HOOPER, a decided step will have been taken toward the correction of the worst features of Treasury management.

The Crime Against Witnesses.

In the recent report of the Police Commissioners there are some very just remarks regarding the hardships and injustice which are imposed upon non-resident witnesses by confining them in the House of Detention, while the malefactor against whom they are to testify is often at liberty on worthless bail. It does not require much investigation to discover how such a course toward innocent parties, who have had either the misfortune to be present at the commission of an offence or to have been victims of a crime, has the effect of defeating the ends of justice. The majority of men who are in this manner deprived of the liberty which is clearly their right, will close their lips rather than divulge the knowledge which will place them for an indefinite period in close duress.

It is the custom to confine non-resident witnesses, through lack of the necessary bail, for their appearance in Court for the purpose of obeying a provision of the State Constitution which declares that in a criminal action the defendant is entitled to produce witnesses in his behalf, and to be confronted with the witnesses against him in the presence of the Court. This construction of the Constitution seems to be in direct contravention of one of the first principles of law, which asserts that no man shall be imprisoned except for crime. This principle has been carried out by the Legislature in reference to the unfortunate debtor, and the only case to be found upon the statute book in which it has been deemed wise to modify, if not to contravene it, is in the instance of a witness who is unable to afford such security as a magistrate may prescribe for his appearance upon the trial of a criminal offence. Hundreds of illustrations of the distress which has been occasioned by this provision might be enumerated. Persons have been incarcerated for months who unfortunately have been accidental witnesses of crime, while the defendant has been at liberty,—virtually discharged by means of his ability to give "straw bail."

An abuse so flagrant and subversive of the right of every citizen to be protected in his liberty, where, by his own act he has not forfeited it to the law, demands correction.

The proper manner of abolishing this infamous wrong is shown in the amended Code of Criminal Procedure, which was reported to the Legislature several years since, by the Commissioners who had been appointed for the purpose. They recommend that whenever it shall satisfactorily appear, by the examination upon oath of the witness, or any other person, that the witness is unable to procure sureties, he ought forthwith to be examined on the part of the people. This recommendation, of course, ought not to apply to the prosecutor, or to an accomplice in the commission of an offence, both of whom should be held, in order that the defendant may not be deprived of the benefit of their cross-examination before a trial jury.

The Legislature ought to act in this matter at once.

More Tinkering with Disabilities.

The Senate has before it a bill passed by the House, removing political disabilities from residents of Southern States; and the House has just passed other bills of the same character, as reported by the Reconstruction Committee. Several hundred citizens seem likely thus to be restored to civil and political usefulness before the close of the session. It is creditable to the House that it refused by a decisive majority to gratify partisan malignity by striking out some of the names reported. It assumed that the Committee had good ground for the recommendations, and did what it could to give them the effect of law.

The objection to this method of dealing with the question of disabilities is the neglect of a general principle, and the injustice which is done to large numbers of persons whose title to relief is ignored, though in all respects as valid as that of the persons named in these bills. The rule laid down is, that relief shall be granted to those who prove themselves loyal in their relations to the new order of things. In practice, however, it embraces only those who make themselves conspicuous, or in some manner obtain the good opinion of Republican officials or Congressmen. The many who pursue their avocations in quiet, and have neither the disposition to seek nor the chance to earn the indorsement of local committees, are left under the cloud. The inferior material which comes to the surface obtains the benefit of remedial legislation; the patient, unobtrusive merit which remains out of sight, continues to suffer the harsh penalties of the law.

If the time has come when disabilities may be safely removed, the better method of procedure would seem to be the adoption of a general measure, based upon a just and intelligible principle, and obviating all suspicion of invidiousness or partiality. The present plan may not be designedly partial, but it looks so; and the impression upon the Southern mind is not favorable to the fairness or generosity of the Government. By enacting a comprehensive measure, the only remaining source of irritation in the reconstructed States would be removed, and the magnanimous promise of the Chicago Convention would be fulfilled. It would be better to except from relief the "men who had gone from the Senate Chamber to organize rebellion"—whose continued exclusion from office Mr. TRUMBULL demands—than to adhere to a process by which the removal of disabilities is made to wear the semblance of partisan favor.

The Chances for Women to Work.

The opening of a school to teach women the business of telegraphing is a very important step toward improving their condition. What women need more than anything else, in this country and at this time, is the chance to work,—the chance to earn their own living, to maintain themselves in independence and comfort, without losing their reputation or forfeiting their self-respect. Everything done which can aid them in achieving this result, is a positive boon to women, and deserves the most hearty encouragement.

There are and always will be thousands of women in every community who have nobody to rely on for support. Very many never have a chance to marry, and many more are deserted by their husbands, or find it impossible to live with them. Many are left widows,—or overtaken by misfortune that deprives them of support,—sometimes with children dependent upon them for the means of living, and without property, friends or aid of any kind. Every society has, and always must have, thousands of women thus thrown out of the smooth grooves of common life, and forced to find or make a path for themselves as best they may.

What can such women do to obtain a living? What position can be more helpless or hopeless than theirs? There is no recognized place or occupation for them in the ordinary walks of business or of labor. If a woman thus situated has had the advantages of a good education, she may teach. If she has special talent and training for any walk of art she may paint, or embroider, or sing, or give readings, or go upon the stage; but there is, after all, but little demand for such services, and unfortunately the number of dependent women who have the talent to make their efforts in such walks successful, compared with the whole number of those who must do something, is very small. Sewing, domestic service, drudgery of one sort or another, is about all that is left for the great multitude of them; and for none of these things are they either well fitted or have they the slightest talent or taste.

The proper condition for a woman, in all civilized countries, is undoubtedly that of dependence upon somebody else for support. It is the office of men to earn a living by work; and in a perfect state of society men will earn all that is needed for the support of both sexes. But the state of society never is perfect. There are always accidents and mishaps, which disturb its arrangements, and throw some of its members out of the channels in which they should move; and women are the victims of these mishaps more often than men, and are rendered the more helpless by them.

Now what is a woman, when thus suddenly thrown upon her own resources, perhaps with children dependent upon her, to do? She ought to be able to find some calling open to her,—some trade, some business, some simple art easily acquired and easily practiced, in which society has need of her services, and to which, therefore, she could promptly resort with a reasonable certainty of being able to earn by it a comfortable living. It is so elsewhere. It is so preëminently in France and, to a less extent, in England and throughout Europe. Women there are very largely employed as clerks in dry-goods shops, as cashiers and accountants, as attendants at post offices, as operators in telegraph offices, as type-setters, proof-readers, and in many other occupations which with us are monopolized by men, and to which women seldom get access. We are beginning to improve somewhat upon this state of things in some departments. Women are coming to be somewhat extensively employed as clerks and assistants in public offices. Many are beginning to learn the trade of type-setting. And the opening of a school to teach women the business of telegraphing, with the encouragement of employment proffered by the great telegraph company of the country, is another step in the right direction.

But there is one mistake women must not make in this matter, into which those who are acting for them are quite likely to fall;—we mean the mistake of demanding equal payment with men. It may be right and just that they should have it;—and if it is, they will be quite certain to get it in the end. But just now the question is not one of rights, but of getting work. They are now crowded out of the field by the men, who have sole possession and mean to keep it. The only chance for women to get into the field at all is by making it a matter of interest for those who control it, to let them in. So long as their labor is cheaper than that of men, there will be a powerful reason for employing it,—the most powerful of all the reasons which control the industrial arrangements of the world. When this ceases to exist,—when women become parties to Unions, and strikes and other artificial means of forcing high prices for labor, and refuse to work at all, except at prices fixed by others than themselves, they will lose the main motive which gives them a chance of employment at all. They can never count on being employed as a matter of right; they must make it a matter of interest for others to employ them. When they secure recognition as a skillful, faithful, profitable class of workers, they may more nearly dictate their own terms; but what they want now is a chance to work; they want places now occupied by men; and those they can get only by underbidding the men,—by giving the same work at a less price. If they surrender the right to do this, they throw away their main means of securing their chance to work at all.

The Whisky Fraud Trials.

The World and the Tribune seem to agree cordially in regarding what they style the "Courtney-Bailey-Fullerton business" as nothing but a "ferocious fight between these three officials, in which the people of the United States have really very little interest." Perhaps it is so,—though it is scarcely likely to strike the public in that light. Mr. BAILEY is a revenue officer who has procured the indictment of a large number of persons for defrauding the revenue. Mr. COURTNEY is the District-Attorney who has brought the cases to trial, and who has convicted and sent to the Penitentiary a good many of the accused and guilty parties. Mr. FULLERTON is an outside party who, under cover of authority from President JOHNSON, opened a crusade against both these public officers, and was himself indicted by a Grand Jury for having conspired to extort money from a Revenue Collector; and his intervention in the matter was used to delay the trials of other parties long enough to allow them to escape. And now he has succeeded, through the Attorney-General, in securing the delay of his own trial for an indefinite time. The only "fight" in the case seems to have been between the public officers, COURTNEY and BAILEY, and the parties indicted for crime—the former trying to bring the latter to trial, and the latter very naturally resisting the attempt. In dismissing the matter as of no public importance, the Tribune and World are, of course, aiding the effort of the indicted parties to avoid a trial.

A Railroad in Broadway.

The Broadway Railroad bill is up again in the Legislature, in as bad a shape and with the same general features as usual. The proposition is to give the franchise, without compensation, to a dozen individuals who happen to want it, and to authorize them to monopolize the main thoroughfare of our City for their own uses, and to render it virtually useless for everybody else. This is substantially what street railroads have actually done for nearly every street through which they run. Ann-street, West-street, Church-street are rendered utterly useless for the accommodation of carriages, hacks, business wagons and vehicles of every sort by the railroad tracks laid down, and by the railway cars that run through them. It is true, a great many people ride in these cars, and are accommodated by them. But that is not a good reason for depriving those who do not ride in them, of the use of the public streets altogether.

Broadway is now the only street through which carriages, carts or business wagons can pass from the lower to the upper part of the City. The consequence is that it is crowded throughout the day. We need other streets parallel to it for the accommodation of the public. But certainly, in the absence of such parallel streets, we cannot afford to have Broadway itself blocked up by a railroad. There is no public demand for such a railroad. Aside from those who expect to make money out of it, nobody wants it;—and unfortunately aside from those who fear they will be pecuniarily injured by it, few will take the trouble to protest against it.

We have railroads enough already. What is needed is,—not more roads,—but to make those we have more efficient and capable of accommodating the public. The great necessity of the day is to substitute steam for horse power on our City roads. When that is done, every road now in the City can transport three times as many passengers as it does now,—twice as quickly and with greater comfort. To say that this cannot be done, is nonsense. If the managers of the roads will set about it in earnest, they can devise means of doing it and procure the assent of the Common Council, as readily and as easily as they now take possession of public streets and public squares for their own use, or accomplish any object on which they have set their hearts. This is not done because they are not in earnest in wishing it done.

MINOR TOPICS.

Quite a number of people have taken to printing letters in the newspapers addressed "To Gen. GRANT, President elect of the United States," and a Philadelphia writer on the tariff has already published an octavo volume of letters to that address. This is doubtless thought to be a good way to get the public to read these letters; but their writers must certainly have wit enough to know that it would be utterly impossible for the functionary to whom they are addressed to find time (to say nothing of disposition) for reading a tenth part of them. It would be enough to drive anybody crazy to read them all.

"Hiram" writes to the Star (we don't know who "Hiram" may be) challenging the TIMES to "champion the side" of the boss bricklayers against the journeymen, as regards the eight-hour question, the apprentice laws, and the action of the Bricklayers' Union. We must decline to "champion" the interests of the bosses in these matters, as such a proceedure would not be in our style. When either one side or the other, in this business or any other, adopts a course which we consider prejudicial to their own best interests, we shall, for their own benefit, point out their error, and shall attempt to indicate, for their own advantage, the proper line to be pursued. We are quite as ready to censure the bosses as the journeymen when they take wrong or foolish steps. It is this way we "champion" the rights of labor and of capital—neither of which can be disturbed without injuring the other, and damaging the whole community. Even "Hiram" can understand this in course of time.

We notice that a number of new coöperative movements, in the way of grocery stores, and small manufactories, have lately been begun. If they are managed by men of integrity and ability they will succeed. If not, they will surely fail.

On Friday last, the tomb of President LINCOLN, at Springfield, was decorated by the citizens—the day being the anniversary of his birth. On Monday last, the remains of BOOTH, his assassin, were surrendered by the Government, and given over to his family, for "Christian" burial. On Tuesday last, the Senate debated for the second or third time, the petitition of Mr. LINCOLN'S widow for a pension, but came to no conclusion.

With the curious audacity of intellect characteristic of that singular and singularly brilliant man, CHARLES READE adopts these words as the motto of his new story, "Put Yourself in His Place," which is to be begun in the March Galaxy:

"I will frame a work of fiction upon notorious fact, so that anybody shall think he can do the same; shall labor and toil, attempting the same, and fail—such is the power of sequence and connection in writing."

The advance sheets of the opening chapters certainly promise a novel, sensational and remarkable enough to justify the throwing down of such a gauntlet.

There is a bill before the Legislature for an increase in the salaries of the Metropolitan Fire Department so as to make them correspond with the salaries in the Police Department. At the same time there is a proposition before the Legislature for an increase in the salaries of the Police Department This is a very pretty business all around, and, if kept up long enough, and carried far enough, must ultimately result in our paying very elevated and ornamental salaries to all parties.

Our contemporaries are suggesting various improvements in the construction and management of velocipedes. One says there ought to be a back to the seat; another thinks three wheels would be better than two. We suggest four wheels with shafts and a good-sized pony to draw the machine. The more nearly they approach the American buggy,—or, better still, a basket wagon,—the more comfortable and convenient they will be.

In different parts of yesterday's TIMES were three particular statements about President JOHNSON: first, that our Common Council—following the example of Baltimore—proposed to give him a public reception if he come through this City on his way to Tennessee; second, that one of our European steamship lines had offered him a passage to Europe at the close of his term, which offer he had accepted; third, that, according to our Tennessee letter, the politicians of Tennessee are greatly agitated over the prospect of his running for Governor of the State. It seems from all this that President JOHNSON means to keep himself in the public eye, with the view, probably, of running for the Presidency in 1872 as the Independent People's Democratic Constitutional Anti-Taxation candidate.

A number of Republican meetings have been held in different parts of the country for the purpose of calling upon Congress to repeal the Tenure-of-Office law, and thus give President GRANT a fair and free opportunity to purify the public service. The recent debates on the subject in the Senate indicate that the repealing bill, which passed the House, has a good chance of becoming law. The Senators opposed to the repeal do not pretend to produce any arguments on their side.

Police Commissioner BRENNAN is making a very ostentatious display of his purpose to deal severely with offending Policemen. But is he not carrying the joke a little too far when he proclaims that he will allow "no woman's character to be impugned here!" There are a good many women who would scarcely claim such exemption as this at the hands of the Police. It is all very well for the Commissioner to be polite and gallant; but it is not necessary that he should make himself ridiculous.

The New-York Observer states that the American Bible Society has resolved to abandon its usual May anniversary meeting, and probably other religious societies will follow its example. This will destroy what has been for many years one of the most marked features of New-York society. The May Anniversaries have long been among the most widely attended, and to many the most attractive incidents of the year. Since the old Broadway Tabernacle, in which they were always held, has been removed, they have not been quite what they were before: and the civil war and other events which have come up to divert and absorb public attention, have deprived them of very much of their old éclat. They used to bring thousands of the benevolent and religious from the country districts. But in the City they had ceased to excite special interest.

A very curious question has arisen in Washington. A servant of the Russian Minister is reported to have said that at a dinner party given by his employer, Mr. COCOBAN and Senator BAYARD both said they would give large sums of money to have Mr. LINCOLN put out of the way. Wishing to investigate the matter the Senate Committee summoned the servant in question before them, but he refused to answer any questions on the subject,—saying he should consider himself no better than a spy if he were to reveal conversations that occurred at his master's table. If he is so sensitive on the point how came the story afloat? Did he ever say that such a conversation did take place, or is the rumor a pure fabrication? Both Senator BAYARD and Mr. COCOBAN deny, in the most explicit and emphatic terms, that either of them ever said anything of the kind. Congressional Committees will best consult their own dignity, and be told fewer lies, if they do not pry into dinner-table talk.

The Democrat belabors the TIMES through a long-winded article based on the idea that Revenue Commissioner WELLS is Secretary of the Navy. The Democrat is a new-comer among City journals;—it must get itself posted on public affairs.

The Baltimore American thinks it very desirable that Gen. GRANT should select one member of his Cabinet from among the loyal men of the Southern States. Such action, it thinks, would be regarded with great favor, as indicating his estimate of Southern loyalty, and would aid very much in advancing the feeling of content and satisfaction required for the completion of the work of reconstruction. This, it will be remembered, was precisely the consideration which led to the nomination of ANDREW JOHNSON for Vice-President. But the state of the country now is by no means what it was then.

The evening schools of this City are closing about this time with some interesting exercises, showing the good they have been the means of effecting. But why should they be weary of well-doing and come to a stop? They are capable of doing good, all the year round, and should be continued, since they supply a general want in a community like ours, where people must go to work so early in life. Young people should always have the opportunity of sitting over books and learning something; and they would certainly learn more in one month at an adult age than they did previously in a year. Common sense and the best social policy call for evening schools, as the necessary complements of day schools, through all the months of the year. It is a fatal sort of absurdity to assume that a lad is done school when he goes to work, and when his intellect is naturally fittest and most eager to learn.

The Provisional Government of Spain has stoutly joined issue with the angry Church, and declared itself, according to its own form of expression, ready to take up the glove of its opponent. A proclamation to this effect has been issued by SERRANO, who, alluding to the resolute assassination of the Governor of Burgos in the cathedral, assures all concerned that any reaction of the priest party shall be met with the whole force of the army and navy. These are brave words; but they show some apprehension too; and if the Spanish bishops, like those of old Milan, were to "ring their bells," the "provisionals" would probably find something more to do in the streets.

The great railways are under way everywhere, simultaneously with the great Isthmian canals, great ocean cables and great suspension bridges. The Costa Rica Secretary of State has made a contract with certain American citizens to build a railway from Limon Bay to the Gulf of Nicoya. The contract has been just concluded, and we may soon look for the railway bonds in the City. At the same time, a company of English contractors and engineers are at Balize, in Honduras, preparing to begin a railway which is to run from Omoa, on this side, to the Gulf of Fonseca, in the Pacific. All this concerns Boston, New-York and Norfolk; for unless we can have good roads across this continent our business of two worlds will flow away toward the Gulf of Mexico. But no doubt there will be trade enough and room enough in this Western Hemisphere for all sorts of oceanic enterprise.

The Late Sol. Smith.

From an interesting sketch of the late SOLOMON F. SMITH, published in the St. Louis Republican, we take the following:

SOL. SMITH was numbered among our oldest citizens, and probably no resident of the city was more widely known, he having been for a long series of years a theatrical manager and popular actor in most of the principal cities of the West and South, and during most of these years he regarded St. Louis as his home. His loss will be deeply regretted by our citizens generally, but especially by those to whom he had been long socially known.

He abandoned theatrical management, and all business connection with the theatres, in 1853, and soon thereafter turned his attention to the practice of law in this city. During the latter years of his life he occasionally mingled in politics, but had no aspirations for the emoluments of office, and the whole field was uncongenial to his nature. In this connection, we may add that in 1861 he was elected a member of the Missouri State Convention as an unconditional Union man, and in that body bore a part in erecting a Provisional Government for the State.

The early part of SOL. SMITH'S theatrical career was chequered, and marked by various vicissitudes of fortune in the sparsely-settled West, but he bore up manfully under many reverses, and finally achieved substantial fame as an actor, and accumulated a very handsome fortune.

He grew up with the theatrical spirit of the West and expanded with it. He became a power in the theatrical world, and his experience of the stage extended over nearly half a century. As an actor, his forte was comedy, and he belonged to the old legitimate stock of comedians, of whom so few are left to grace the stage. As a social companion, his temperament was genial, and he possessed a most kindly disposition. He was also a humorist of no mean pretensions, and his contributions of this character to the Press are widely known and greatly relished. He could tell a good story and embellish it with a quaintness of style that was sure to win the applause of his hearers.

SOL. SMITH prepared an epitaph for himself, to be engraved upon a plain stone in Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis. It is as follows:

SOL. SMITH,
Retired Actor.
1801—18—.

"Life's but a walking shadow; a poor player,
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage,
And then is heard no more."

"All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women merely players."

Tammany Masked Ball.

The succession of masquerades this Winter, frequented by the pretty actresses of the different theatres, and the wild enjoyment experienced there, suggested to those young ladies a little more dancing with the gay jeunesse dorée of the City. A ball, consequently, was projected by the Tammany company, at the suggestion of Mr. EDWARD M. FOX, the business agent, and Mr. HARRISON of the box office. Irving Hall was decided on as the festive scene, and invitations were sent to the members of all the different metropolitan theatres, together with numerous ladies and gentlemen unconnected with the histrionic profession. Last night was the time appointed, and the hall was gaily decorated with flags for the occasion. The ball was strictly an invitation affair, but many persons who had not been invited were anxious to procure tickets, and offers to the extent of $15 each were several times made for them. Owing to the late hour of the closing of the theatres, the guests did not arrve till near midnight; but, when the dancing began, it was kept up with great spirit until near daylight. Nobody was admitted to the floor without a mask, and it was difficult, therefore, to determine the identity of the ladies present. The richness and elegance of many of the costumes, however, warranted the supposition that the Speculations as to the Occupancy of the Spanish Throne—More Troops to Sail for Cuba.

PARIS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The reports that EX-KING FERDINAND, of Portugal, has consented to be a candidate for the Spanish Throne are premature. Though strongly urged, he still refuses to allow his name to be used in connection with the sovereignty of Spain. The majority of the members of the Constituent Cortes now in session, at Madrid, are opposed to the Duke of Montpensier, and there is little prospect of his success.

MADRID, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

In addition to the large detachment of reinforcements about to sail from Cadis for Cuba, the Government will send out, as soon as the necessary transportation is ready, another expedition, which will number at least 6,000 men.

Attempt to Assassinate Gen. Prim at Madrid.

Considerable excitement was created yesterday by an unsuccessful effort to assassinate Gen. PRIM. Three arrests have been made of persons believed to be implicated in the affair.

News from the Paraguayan Prisoners—Bliss and Masterman on their Way Home.

PARIS, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

Full details of the South American news are published here to-day. Mr. MCMAHON, the American Minister to Paraguay, accompanied President LOPEZ to the interior after the capture of Viletta. BLISS and MASTERMAN, the attachés of the American Legation, who were arrested at the time of Minister WASHBURNE'S departure, and who are charged by LOPEZ with conspiracy for his overthrow, were at Rio Janeiro in the United States flagship. It was supposed they were on their way home for trial.

Reply to the Queen's Speech—The American Treaty.

LONDON, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The address in reply to the Hueen's speech was agreed to unanimously in both Houses of Parliament. In the House of Commons last evening, Mr. DISRAELI expressed his sorrow that the ratification of the convention with the United States was not announced. He hoped, however, for a speedy completion of the treaty. Mr. GLADSTONE was sure that the negotiations would end in the same spirit in which they commenced. The final issue would doubtless be satisfactory to both countries.

The Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Bill in the Pennsylvania Senate.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The bill introduced in the Senate last week, intended to prevent the present stockholders of the Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company from managing their own property by keeping three-fourths of the old directors in office, still remains in the Senate Committee, with very little prospect of its passage. It was expected here that the annual report of the Pennsylvania Railroad would express some interest in the contest between the Fort Wayne Directors and the Erie Railroad, but the report is not only silent on the subject, but speaks highly in favor of the Columbus route between Pittsburg and Chicago. This independent position of the Pennsylvania Railroad narrows the contest down to an effort of the present Fort Wayne directors to keep themselves in office. It is hinted that the effort is made in reality to throw the Democratic influence of the road in favor of the nomination of one of its officers for Governor of this State. The Erie Railroad Company has paid no attention to the legislative efforts to interfere with the vested rights of stockholders, believing all such efforts unconstitutional.

They also will be placed upon the reservation.

Adjournment of the Quebec Legislature—Terrible Snow-Storm in Canada.

MONTREAL, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The Quebec Legislature adjourned yesterday for want of a quorum, only twelve members being present. A snow-storm stopped the trains and prevented the members from reaching the capital. The snow in the streets here is eight feet deep, and some streets are almost impassable. The roof of the drill-shed fell in this afternoon, owing to the weight of the snow. The trains from the East and West are very much delayed. A statement published by the SAULT STE. MARIE CANAL CO. says that the snow this Winter so far is about 118 inches, which exceeds by 38 inches the total fall in any year for twenty years past.

Several extensive lumber merchants in the Ottawa district have closed their operations for the Winter, owing to the difficulty in getting provisions into the woods for the men.

Negroes as Railroad Passengers in Virginia.

RICHMOND, Va., Wednesday, Feb. 17.

In the United States Circuit Court, Judge UNDERWOOD presiding, the case of ROBERT STEVENS, a negro, of Charleston, S. C., against the Richmond and Fredericksburg Railroad Company, for putting his wife in a second-class car by force, after selling her a first-class ticket, came up. The Judge, in his charge to the jury, which was composed of half blacks and half whites, said:

"Distinction on account of color was a relic of barbarism, which had been happily done away with, even in that sink of iniquity New-York, where it had been tolerated longer than elsewhere to secure Southern trade. After an incidental statement to the effect that Virginians were given to drunkness, and their clergy were not exempt from this frailty, the Judge read several extracts from the Bible, and closed by instructing the jury to teach this country that they must not make distinctions on account of color. The jury brought in a verdict of $1,400 damages for plaintiff."

SOCIAL SCIENCE.

The Convention at Albany—Addresses by J. Meredith Read, Samuel Elliot and Prof. Goldwin Smith.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The American Social Science Convention met at Agricultural Hall this evening. The opening address was delivered by J. MEREDITH READ, Jr. The President of the Association, SAMUEL ELLIOT, of Boston, then delivered an able address explanatory of the objects of the Association.

Prof. GOLDWIN SMITH, of Cornell University, was then presented, and read the first paper of the present session of the Association. His subject was "University Education." The first and largest portion of his address was a statement somewhat in detail of the system of education pursued at the two leading English Universities; its monastic origin and the efforts that had been and were now being made, to modify and improve it. Coming down to the subject of university education he considered the comparative merits of a general and professional course of studies, and also the position which the classics would occupy in a general course. The classical course had its origin in the middle ages when it was the only means of unlocking the sources of knowledge. Though not of that prime necessity as formerly, yet the classics were still of great importance in a liberal course of education. The superiority of the Greek and Latin languages remains undiminished, that of the Greek especially. He was not sure that they had ever yet fulfilled their mission, and the Latin would not once more be the language of law, and the Greek of science. The only language that can compare with them is the English. The writing of Latin verses was now deemed the most useless part of the English University course, and yet an eminent London journrlist had told him that the best writers he had met in point of form were those who had distinguished themselves at college by writing Latin verses. With reference to the position that physical science should occupy in the university course, he could only say that these sciences alone should be adopted. That could be thoroughly mastered by the student, and yet leave room for literary education. The evils of literary education without science were well known in England. The evils of scientific education without literary training were beginning to appear. A true university had a twofold duty to perform: That of advancing learning and science as well as teaching it. The Professors should not be overworked, but should have leisure to pursue their own studies, to increase their knowledge and keep up with the most advanced thought and discovery of the age. What would NEWTON have done for the advancement of science if he had been compelled to hear four recitations a day in the rudiments of science, and run about the country delivering lectures, to eke out the balance of a subsistence? He would suggest to the Social Science Association the necessity in founding investments of making provision for a residence in the institution of a class of students who had passed their college course. Such students might be of great assistance to the Professors, particularly to the teachers of science, and would help to advance the reputation of a University as a seat of learning. If there were to be special departments, he would plead for a department of political science. It could not fail to elevate the politician into the statesman. The world was beginning to discover that politics were not merely a matter of passion and declamation, and a department of political science in our university would do much to improve and elevate the standard of political morals and intelligence. The speaker then referred briefly to the subject of college discipline, and expressed his approval of the semi-military discipline adopted at the Cornell University, as being better than any he had yet seen, and the only effective discipline likly to be submitted to in a country like this. Lastly, he considered the question of university education for women. The popular talk about the highest education for woman cuts both ways. The highest education for woman was that kind of an education which was best adapted to her. Unless physiology was prepared to show that there was really no difference between man and woman, he must certainly object to the English university system of competitive examinations for women. They were of doubtful expediency in a sanitary point of view for men, and in his opinion would never do for young ladies. Any general system of education for woman must have reference to the normal condition of women, and not for exceptional cases. Now the normal duties of women were those of wife and mother, and it was to aid the performance of these duties that woman's education should mainly tend. The fact that this cry for university education for women came at the same time and chiefly from the same source as the Woman's Rights movement should inspire a watchfulness and caution on the part of this Association in adopting its teachings.

The Association will meet again to-morrow morning and afternoon, and a reception will be given them in the Assembly Chamber in the evening.

Report of Mr. E. B. Elliott on the Metric System of Coinage.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Feb. 17

On the 21st of July, 1868, Hon. WILLIAM D. KELLEY, Chairman of the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures, reported a bill (H. R., 1,445,) to promote the establishment of an international metrical system of coinage. The Secretary of the Treasury requested Mr. E. B. ELLIOTT to examine this bill and give his views in relation thereto. In accordance with this request Mr. ELLIOTT has made a very interesting and elaborate report, which the Secretary transmitted to the House on the 9th inst., where it was referred to the Committee above mentioned and ordered to be printed. The bill provides:

1. That the future gold coinage of the United States shall weigh one and two-thirds grammes to the dollar, and shall be nine-tenths fine, 2. each dollar shall contain one and a half grammes of pure gold, and the remainder shall be alloy. 2. Such coin shall be legal tenders in payments after a specified future date, and $1,000 of this new coinage shall be the legal equivalent of $1,000 of the old coinage of the United States. 3. That they shall have their weight in grammes and fineness stamped upon them. 4. That silver half dollars and smaller silver coins shall, in future coinage, consist of standard silver, nine-tenths fine, and weigh 25 grammes to each dollar of value, and shall have their weight and fineness stamped upon them, and shall be legal tender for payment of all sums not exceeding $10. Mr. ELLIOTT indorses all the features of the bill, and sets forth the importance of its enactment by Congress, and the advantages which would probably result therefrom. He says the gold coinage of the United States is very nearly metrical. By reducing their standard weight about three parts in one thousand, or 3-1,000, they would be strictly metrical, and would thus have exact and simple relations to the coins of Germany. It seems desirable that the union crown of Germany, the United States gold dollar, the gold franc of France and the gold pound of Great Britain should have such simple relations to each other in point of value that the following equivalents may obtain, viz.: Three union crowns equal twenty dollars (gold,) equal one hundred francs (gold,) equal one thousand pence (gold,) or four pounds of two hundred and fifty pence each. After referring to the present standards that prevail, the hope is expressed that the decision of commercial nations will be in favor of the German standard, 4 4, thirty grammes of fine gold, rather than the French standard, which is some what less, on the sole ground of metrical simplicity. We should then have gold coins as follows: Three union crowns, twenty metrical dollars, one hundred metrical francs, fourteen metrical pounds, or one thousand metrical pence, each weighing thirty-three and one-third grammes of standard gold, nine-tenths fine, and containing thirty grammes of pure gold.

The report contains numerous tables which embrace much interesting and valuable information relative to the monetary systems of the leading nations of the world, and is deserving of the careful perusal of the business portion of the community and all others who are interested in the subject to which it relates.

EUROPEAN NEWS BY MAIL.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP CITY OF NEW-YORK.

The steamship City of New-York, which left Liverpool on Feb. 3 and Queenstown on Feb. 4, reached this port yesterday, bringing two days' later news than was previously at hand.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce met Feb. 1. In a series of interesting addresses the importation of cotton, the commercial policy of the United States compared with that of Great Britain, and many kindred subjects were discussed.

Permission to be sold in the streets has been withdrawn from the Paris Gaulois on account of an article insinuating that the reason why the Prince Imperial did not preside at the annual dinner of the Charlemagne Lyceum was that he had not obtained as good prizes as were expected.

M. DE BISMARCK'S last speech has produced considerable irritation in Paris. It is remarked that the Journal Officiel not only abstains from saying a word about it, but does not even mention the important sitting of the Berlin Chamber, in which it was delivered.

The moment is approaching at which the last traces of the Universal Exhibition of 1867 will have disappeared. The demolition of the building occupied by the Imperial Commission and the elegant chalet of the general commissariat is nearly terminated. These constructions had alone remained standing of all that were erected in the Champ de Mars. At the north and south that vast surface is now restored to circulation, and the central portion on which the Exhibition building stood is being leveled. Double rows of trees are being planted parallel with the Avenues de Labourdonnaye and de Suffren, to replace those which formerly bordered the eastern and western sides of the space between the Ecole Militaire and the Seine.

THE IRISH CHURCH.

The Privilege of Convocation Denied the Irish Bishops.

The following memorial has been presented by the Irish Bishops to the Queen:

To the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty:

We, the Archbishops and Bishops of the Irish branch of the United Church of England and Ireland, respectfully approach your Majesty, humbly praying that your Majesty would be graciously pleased to grant to this branch of the United Church the same liberty of meeting in Convocation which is enjoyed by the English provinces.

We have felt it our duty to lay the same request before your Majesty already, but we do it the more urgently at the present instant, seeing that measures are pending which most nearly affect the welfare of this Church, on which, if left in debate, it seems only just that the Bishops and clergy should be able in a regular and constitutional manner to deliberate and express their judgment.

We are further persuaded that, in the event of serious changes being made in the outward conditions of our Church, the consequences would be most disastrous if there were no such body always in existence, able to consult and advise the whole Church with authority in a crisis which, at the best, must be full of difficulty and danger.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

Signed M. G. Armagh, Samuel Meath, R. Down, H. Kilmore, Charles B. Tuam, William Derry, Richard C. Dublin, J. F. Ossory and Ferns, Robt. Cashel, Wm. Killaloe, John Cork, Charles Limerick.

It has received the following reply:

WHITEHALL, Jan. 29.

MY LORD: I beg to inform your Grace that I have had the honor to lay before the Queen the memorial of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Irish branch of the United Church of England and Ireland, of the 23d of December last, and praying that Her Majesty would be graciously pleased to grant to that branch of the United Church the same liberty of meeting in Convocation which is enjoyed by the English Provinces, and I regret to inform your Grace that Her Majesty's Government, after mature consideration of the memorial, do not feel justified in advising Her Majesty to accede to its prayer. I have, &c.,

H. A. BRUCE.

His Grace the Archbishop of Armagh.

John Bright on Capital Punishment.

From the Springfield Republican, Feb. 17.

The following letter from JOHN BRIGHT to one of our countrymen, though written more than a year ago, is just published, and is of general interest:

DEAR SIR: I do not think the punishment of death is necessary to the security and well-being of society; and I believe its total abolition would not tend to increase those crimes which it is now supposed by many to prevent. The security and well-being of society do not depend upon the severity of punishments. Barbarism in the law promotes barbarism among those subject to the law; and acts of cruelty under the law become examples of similar acts done contrary to law. The real security for human life is to be found in a reverence for it. If the law regarded it as inviolable, then the people would begin also so to regard it. So deep reverence for human life is worth more than a thousand executions in the prevention of murder, and is, in fact, the great security for human life. The law of capital punishment, while pretending to support this reverence, does, in fact, tend to destroy it. If the death penalty is of any force in any case to deter from crime, it is of much more force in lessening our chief security against it, for it proclaims the fact that Kings, Parliaments, Judges and juries may determine when and how men may be put to death by violence, and familiarity with this idea cannot strengthen the reverence for human life. To put men to death for crimes, civil or political, is to give proof of weakness rather than strength, and of barbarism rather than Christian civilization. If the United States could get rid of the gallows, it would not stand long here. One by one we "Americanize" our institutions; and I hope, in all that is good, we may not be unwilling to follow you.

I am very truly yours, JOHN BRIGHT.

Progress of the Insurrection—Movements of Revolutionists and of Troops—Gen. Dulce's Proclamations.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Feb. 13.

The reports which we have had almost daily for the past week of risings by the disaffected, or demonstrations made by the insurgents at different points, show that the revolutionary movement is still far from being suppressed. It seems to be the generally expressed opinion that on the 21st of this month, when the term of forty days allowed in Gen. DULCE'S proclamation of the 12th of January for the return of the insurgents to their several homes and deliver up their arms, shall be completed, that important events may be expected. Both sides are evidently preparing for a grand struggle. VALMASEDA and his forces are almost in a state of quietude, while the revolutionists are working their wires for more arms, men, ammunition and outside help, and actively drilling their men and enlisting new adherents to their cause.

From the 6th inst. the telegraphic communications have been interrupted between Cienfuegos and Havana. On the arrival of the steamer Rapido at Batabario, on Sunday, the 7th inst., we learned that a considerable number of insurgents had risen in the District of Camarones, which is situated on the line of the railroads between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara, and that which also leads to Sagua La Grande. The first act which they hastened to perform was to cut a railroad line between Cienfuegos and Villa Clara. As soon as the news of this rising reached Cienfuegos, the Lieutenant-Governor of the place started in pursuit with all the troops at his command, and leaving the town garrisoned by the volunteer corps.

Private letters received from Cienfuegos state that this movement is of more formidable proportions than was at first apparent, and asserts that the revolutionists number some 4,000, and have for leaders VILLEMIL, MAZA, REDONDO, CAVADA and other well known and influential men. The CAVADA mentioned is ADOLFO CAVADA, who served during the war in the United States as Colonel of a Philadelphia regiment of Zouaves, and lately has been the United States Vice-Consul at Cienfuegos, until removed at the request of Captain-General LERSUNDI. About a week ago his brother, FREDERICK F. CAVADA, who also served in the United States as Lieutenant-Colonel of a New-York regiment, and was for a long time prisoner of war in the Libby Prison, Richmond, and author of a book called Prison Life, resigned the position he has held since the war of United States Consul at Trinidad, and it is strongly suspected has joined the revolutionists.

Several attempts at revolution have been made in the Vuelta Abajo region, and it is notorious that the state of feeling in that district is very unsettled, although it is affirmed that the prospect of a good crop of tobacco is sufficient guarantee for order until after its harvest.

Letters to the Prensa of the 6th, from Sagua, state that the insurgents had invaded that district, coming from the direction of Los Vueltas, and the same day had taken possession of La Euenicijada, the terminus of the Sagua La Grande Railroad. On the following day they cut all the rail and telegraph communication between Sagua and Villa Clara, near the Cruces. The troops, both regular and volunteer forces, marched for Villa Clara on the 8th. The insurgents are headed by the Monteagudos, of Sagua la Chica.

DULCE'S PROCLAMATIONS.

Gen. DULCE has published the following proclamations:

Superior Political Government of the Ever-faithful Island of Cuba:

The limit fixed by my decree of the 12th of January expires on the 20th day of this month. The Provisional Government of the nation wished to give an example of tolerance and harmony, and was the first to proclaim, in accordance with the saving principles of the revolution of September, a new era of reconciliation and of oblivion of the past. I also spoke in its name, and at my words many were the inhabitants of this island who, understanding the true and legitimate interest of the country, accepted the honest benefit of a measure which, beside affording them well-being and rest in the bosom of their families, foreshadowed the close of a struggle for them desperate and sterile. Spite of this, the disturbers of public order, those who relied for their present importance and future prosperity upon the inevitable destruction and necessary annihilation of the land in which they were born, and others who endeavored to retard the action of the Courts of justice, far from ceasing, redoubled their shrewd machinations with the criminal purpose and deliberate intention of placing me in the painful alternative either of remaining indifferent and remiss, or of resorting to violent measures, always subject to false interpretation, and which, besides being repugnant to me, would have contributed to put in doubt the stability of the political concessions of the revolution, and the noble desires and regenerating impulses of the Provisional Government. Unfortunately for them they have succeeded in the latter respect. However, the insurrectionists of Yara, and all who were found with arms in their hands on the 12th day of January, have yet open to them the course of conduct marked out in my decree of amnesty; and open it shall remain until the 20th day of this month. Not so those who to-day, deluded undoubtedly by the imaginary and chimerical possibility of victory, rise at the cry of independence, burning property and destroying the support of an infinite number of families. Neither they nor those who avail themselves of these men as instruments can count upon the generosity of the Government. The social questions demand efficient remedies and terrible sacrifices. And they are greatly mistaken in interpreting as weakness of the Government what has been but tolerance. The public opinion of the rest of the nation shows itself unanimously, regarding integrity of territory at whatever cost, and public tranquility as the best basis for political liberty. The Provisional Government undertook the solemn duty of preserving that liberty and of saving the sacred deposit intrusted to it by the Spanish revolution. That obligation the Provisional Government will discharge. It deplores, nevertheless, to see itself compelled by the evil intention of a few and the absurd ingratitude of many, to adopt measures which, although authorized by the legality of the revolution, do not cease to be contrary to the spirit of progress and the essence of modern institutions. Therefore, and in use of the extraordinary powers devested in me by the Provisional Government of the nation, I do decree the following:

ARTICLE 1. The effects of my decree of the 9th January, regarding the liberty of the Press, cease for the present, and while the present circumstances exist.

ART. 2. The former censorship is reëstablished.

ART. 3. Suits at law already commenced will follow the course marked by the law, in accordance with the provisions of the decree of 9th January.

ART. 4. Newspapers shall not be distributed without the written permission of the Censor.

ART. 5. No newspaper shall be published without a license from the Superior Political Government.

ART. 6. The violation of either of these orders shall be considered as an act of malfeasance, and its author shall be delivered to be tried by Court-martial.

HAVANA, Feb. 12, 1869. DOMINGO DULCE.

In use of the extraordinary powers vested in me by the Provisional Government of the nation, I do decree the following:

ARTICLE 1. All acts of malfeasance shall be tried by the usual Courts-martial.

ART. 2. Suits at law already commenced will follow the course marked by the laws for the Courts of justice.

ART. 3. Any aggression by act or deed against any of the delegates of the Government will be considered as an act against its authority, and its author subject to trial by Court-martial. DOMINGO DULCE.

HAVANA, Feb. 12, 1869.

Clothing Cutters' Strike.

The clothing cutters on strike held their usual meeting last night, at No. 10 Stanton-street, but received no reports of additional employing houses to those already mentioned, having accorded the $24 a week demanded. An assessment of $4 a week each having been levied on the employed members of the Union for the support of those on strike, a chief feature of the evening proceedings was that of receiving the contributions. To-night a mass meeting will be held at the same place.

Printers' Strike.

The journeymen book and job printers on strike, held their daily meeting yesterday afternoon at No. 68 East Broadway, but no reports were given of an acquiescence in the new scale of prices on the part of those employers yet in opposition. A statement was made that fifteen additional compositors were out of employment through the temporary stoppage yesterday of The City, through the illness of its proprietor.

Meeting of Employing Printers.

The employing printers held a meeting yesterday at the Astor House, and arranged a new scale of prices to be submitted to the striking journeymen. It was substantially the same as that offered three weeks since, but differs in certain details, which will probably be more acceptable to the strikers.

THE INJUNCTION, LATELY EXISTing, prohibiting transfers of portions of the stock of this Company having been dissolved, notice is hereby given that the transfer books will be opened on the morning of Monday, the 15th inst., and will be closed at the close of business on Saturday, the 27th inst.

Owing to the considerable time for which the books have been closed, because of the recent litigation, and the probable large amount of stock awaiting transfer, it has become necessary to defer the payment of the dividend heretofore advertised for the 20th inst. until the 15th of March next.

For the purpose of facilitating the preparations for its payment, stockholders intending to transfer are requested to do so without delay.

The payment of the Dividend on the "Interest Certificates," issued under the resolution of the Company passed Dec. 10, 1868—also advertised for the 20th inst.—is still enjoined until the further order of the Court.

An Engraved "Interest Certificate," in more appropriate form, is being prepared for substitution for the printed one now outstanding. Public notice will be given when the exchanges can be made.

ADRIAN H. MULLER, P. R. WILKINS & CO. will sell at auction on TUESDAY, March 2, 1869, at 12 o'clock, at the Exchange Salesroom, No. 111 Broadway, BY ORDER OF LEWIS B. BROWN AND CLARENCE S. BROWN, ESQS.,

on high, commanding ground. Is the most eligibly located property in that section of the City. The great improvements now in progress and contemplated, together with the natural advantages of position, &c., combine to render it very desirable either as an investment or for improvement. The property will be sold with restrictions as against nuisances, similar to those contained in the deeds given by the Harsen estate; like restrictions will also cover the line of land lying north of it, thus effectually securing this property for first-class improvements. The sellers pledge themselves that this sale shall be and that there shall be no bidding in their behalf, their object being to multiply the number of interests in the neighborhood, and by selling with the proper restrictions as to buildings, and on unusually liberal terms, so encourage the erection of first-class improvements, thereby enhancing the value of other property owned by them in the immediate vicinity.

The terms of sale will be such as will enable every one to secure a lot for a future home, (while prices are yet low), in what must soon, in an incredibly short space of time, the most fashionable and desirable quarter of the City.

The title of the property is indisputable, and printed abstracts will be furnished to purchasers free of charge. The assessment for the Boulevard and Circle are all paid.

TERMS.—Ten per cent. of the purchase money and the auctioneers' fee to be paid to the auctioneers on the day of sale; twenty per cent. on the 6th day of May, 1869, at the office of Messrs. Anderson, Adams & Young, No. 52 Wall-st., New-York. The balance, 70 per cent., may, at the option of the purchaser, remain on bond and mortgage of the premises for three or five years. Parties desirous of completing their purchase before the 6th day of May can have the privilege of doing so, and will be allowed interest from the time of taking their deeds up to the 6th of May, 1869. The buildings on the lots belong to the occupants, and are to be removed before the 1st day of May next.

ALBANY.

A Railroad in Twenty-third-street—A Bill to Protect Railroads Against Dishonest Conductors—Another Veto.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Wednesday, Feb. 17, 1869.

Nothing of special interest was done in either House of the Legislature to-day. The Senate spent most of its time, before going into Executive session, in passing local bills. Nothing was done in Executive session beyond the confirmation of Notaries.

Mr. HALE's bill for the prevention of bribery was favorably reported by the Judiciary Committee, with some slight amendments.

Senator TWEED introduced a bill for a surface railroad in Twenty-third and other streets of New-York City, the main provisions of which are as follows:

Senator TWEED's bill names as corporators Corse, Hall Corson, George W. McLean, Samuel M. Boyd, John Cox, George Mitchell, James M. Sweeny, Joseph A. Kernan, Oscar Tibbals, John K. N. Kemp, and others. The proposed route ex tends from Twenty-third-street North River, along Twenty-third-street to Eighth-avenue, Greenwich-avenue, Sixth-avenue to Amity-street, Laurens-street, West Broadway, College-place, Barclay-street, Greenwich-street, Dey-street, John-street to Burling-slip. Along the latter to South-street to Fulton ferry, East River; thence along Fulton-street to Church-street, Canal-street to Laurens-street; also along Canal-street to Mercer-street to Eighth-street to Greenwich-avenue to place of beginning.

NO RIDE WITHOUT A TICKET.

Among the new bills introduced in the Assembly was one designed to protect railroad companies from the dishonesty of their conductors, but in order to accomplish this praiseworthy object, it visits all the penalties of dishonesty upon the unoffending passenger, and would be an intolerable nuisance to the traveling public. It makes it a misdemeanor for any traveler to ride on a railroad without having purchased his ticket before getting into the car; prohibits conductors from receiving any money for fares, and authorizes them to thrust any passenger out of the cars who has no ticket, notwithstanding he may tender his fare to the conductor—except that he may allow the passenger to ride to the nearest station.

ANOTHER VETO.

Gov. HOFFMAN sent in his second veto to-day, which is as follows:

To the Senate:

I return without my signature an act entitled "An act to amend section one of chapter 404, of the laws of 1868, relative to building a bridge at Fort Covington."

The original act authorized the Commissioners of Highways of the town to borrow $3,000 to be expended in rebuilding a bridge across the Salmon River. The present bill increases the amount to $4,000. By a general act passed April 3, 1849, entitled "An act to vest in the Boards of Supervisors certain legislative powers," &c., it was provided among other things "that such Boards in the several counties of the State (except New-York) might authorize any town in their respective counties to borrow any sum, not exceeding $4,000 in one year, to build or repair any roads or bridges in such town, and prescribe the time for the payment of the same, which time shall be within ten years, and for assessing the principal and interest thereof upon such town." This general law rendered any special legislation in regard to the bridge at Fort Covington wholly unnecessary. The subject properly belonged to the Board of Supervisors, which for such and certain other purposes is the County Legislature.

In a message to which I commend your careful study on the 11th inst., in returning a bill without my signature, I called attention to the fact that applications for special legislation in cases covered by general laws, imposed heavily upon the valuable time of the legislature, and increased largely the public expenses, and I suggested that special legislation should always be refused in cases covered by general enactments.

I feel it to be my duty to take this another opportunity to urge these views upon the consideration of the Legislature, and to do all in my power to check an evil which has grown to be one of great magnitude.

JOHN T. HOFFMAN.

The Governor gives his first reception to members of the Legislature this evening. S.

Carried.

RIGHTS OF AMERICAN CITIZENS.

Mr. CREAMER introduced the following resolution, which went to the table under the rule:

Whereas, The Government of Great Britain has on several occasions degraded and outraged the rights of American citizens by casting them into prison on the pretence of suspected sympathy with the Irish people, and did previously, during the civil war, openly manifest its hostility to the cause of the Union and the perpetuity of republican institutions, and now seeks the ratification of a treaty relieving it from the responsibility of its actions; therefore,

Resolved, That our Senators in Congress be respectively requested to refuse to ratify any treaty with the Government of Great Britain, and to reject all overtures looking toward a treaty in which the rights and privileges of American citizens, both native and adopted, are not clearly defined and protected.

Adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

A large number of bills were reported and referred to Committees.

NATURALIZATION.

Mr. HUSTED, from the Committee on Federal Relations, made a report on naturalization.

The report recommends the National Government to control the whole subject, having a special department therefor, and that all naturalization papers granted within the past five years be surrendered and new papers issued.

A VETO MESSAGE.

Col. VAN BUREN, the Private Secretary of the Governor, presented a message from his Excellency vetoing the bill relative to building a bridge at Fort Covington, on the ground of its being special legislation belonging to the Board of Supervisors.

Mr. GLEASON moved to lay the veto on the table. Carried—60 to 52.

RAILROAD REPORT.

On motion of Mr. HUSTED the adverse report of the Railroad Committee, on the bill repealing the law requiring railroad officials to wear a uniform, was taken from the table. He moved to disagree with the report of the Committee, and that the bill be committed to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HUSTED supported this motion, and Mr. LA BAU opposed it at length.

The motion was lost, and the Committee report was agreed to.

Mr. JACOBS offered a resolution that the Committee, of the Assembly report no bills to the House, where the object to be secured can be obtained under the general laws of the State. Debate ensuing, the resolution went over.

Adjourned.

Westward Ho!—The Excelsior Colony Association.

This Association held a meeting last evening at No. 68 East Broadway, at which perhaps a hundred members, and others interested, were present. The object is to associate themselves together in order to facilitate their emigration to Southern Nebraska, and there found a town or colony to be known as the "Excelsior Colony."

The Association, it is intended, shall consist of about 100 or 150 members, thirty of whom have already joined the Association. Each member or head of a family desiring to locate with the colony pays an initiation fee of $5, which goes toward defraying the expenses of the organization, and each pays his own transportation. The lands to be settled on are those of the Government, located in Jefferson County, on the southern boundary of Nebraska, about one hundred miles due west from the Missouri River, and on the line of the Atchison and Fort Kearney branch of the Pacific Railroad. The Association is intended to be made up chiefly of farmers, but including mechanics and tradesmen necessary for the convenience of the colonists. The meeting last evening was the fourth held by the Association, and on Saturday evening next they meet again at the same place. Its officers are LOUIS A. WALKER, President; SANDFORD BROWN, Vice-President; ECKFORD J. ROBINSON, Secretary, and WILLIAM A. WALKER, Vice-President of the Atlantic Savings Bank, Treasurer. It is expected that the Association will be in a condition to start for their western home between the 1st and 10th of April next.

INTERNAL REVENUE CASH.

Suit Against a Collector for $100,000.

A case of considerable interest has for several days past been pending before the United States District Court at Trenton, N. J., the defendants being a Revenue Collector and his sureties, against whom an action was brought by the United States authorities for breach of bond, the loss to the Government by the alleged malfeasance of the Collector being $100,000. Mr. GEORGE W. THORNE is the gentleman against whom the charges were brought, and he, with his sureties, EDGAR B. WAKEMAN, R. MCLOUGHLIN, SAMUEL M. PRENTICE, WILLIAM S. GILBERT and WILLIAM KEENEY were sued for the recovery of the sum of which the Government was defrauded during his term of office. Mr. THORNE was appointed Internal Revenue Collector of the Fifth District of New-Jersey in October, 1866, and went into office on the 1st of November following. During his incumbency, which was three months in duration, application was made to him for the removal of 50,000 gallons of whisky from two bonded warehouses in Jersey City, to California. He was required, by an act of Congress to exact from the applicants for the removal, bonds for an amount double that of the tax on the spirits to be removed. This requirement of the law he was alleged to have fraudulently and negligently met by accepting five worthless and fictitious bonds, and that the whisky was then permitted to be removed without payment of the special tax. The whisky never reached California, and the tax was never paid. The names alone of the sureties to the bond upon which the whisky was obtained, were to be found, the individuals themselves and their worldly possessions were things that Deputy-Marshal BENJAMIN could not discover, and it is therefore suspected that they were "men of straw," called into existence for the purpose of defrauding the Government. The names are Harry Pomeroy, H. Wilkins, E. Behn, James Roster, James Marquard, Frank Walter, MAX HOBZ, James Bradbury, Martin Franz, Chas. Kenrick and George Lardener. No address is given with either name, and when the writs which were issued against them was returned, Collector THORNE replied that he knew nothing about them, nor how he came by the bonds.

It appears from his own testimony, that the duty of looking after the sufficiency of the sureties was intrusted to a clerk, named GARDINER, who was about 19 years of age, and to whom the salary of $600 a year was paid. Upon this handsome stipend the boy was expected to develop a comprehension of the value of bonds to the amount of hundreds of thousands yearly, to watch over the most weighty business of one of the first Revenue offices in the United States, and to exhibit at once discriminate and prompt action, an incorruptible integrity. THORNE testified that he knew nothing about GARDINER, but he came recommended as "a good competent boy." The time of the Collector was occupied "in answering letters and exercising a general superintendence over the office;" he "knew nothing about any bonds received while he was in office;" he once "signed a permit for $55,000 worth of whisky to go out of his possession without reading the bonds, because, as he said, he had not time to read them, and he never looked at the names of sureties." He testified that he told GARDINER to look after the "bond business, for he knew nothing about it," but Mr. WALLIS, his predecessor in the office, said on oath that he had warned him to pay particular attention to them.

GARDINER, to whom THORNE said he had intrusted the "bond business," testified that it was no part of his business to look after the value of the sureties; and that, moreover, in the case of these fraudulent bonds, the permits for transportation were granted before the bonds came into his hands.

Mr. JOHN R. WILLIAMS, an Ex-Inspector of Revenue, swore that he saw a man named COHEN at THORNE's office while the latter was Collector; that he had been informed that COHEN had purchased a large amount of whisky in New-York for transportation to the Fifth District of New-Jersey, and that he then told Mr. THORNE to look out for the man, as there could be no business for such an amount in the Fifth District, and fraud was probably contemplated. This witness also testified to certain suspected transactions between THORNE and a man named ELSTNER, who carried on a distillery in Jersey City, capable of turning out 3,000 gallons a day. The distillery was seized, but THORNE recommended that the distiller should be let off on the payment of a trifling fine.

A Mr. RICHARDS, who is connected with the Internal Revenue Office at Washington, in preparing regulations for the officers of the revenue, testified that two of the transportation bonds, one of which was for more than half the whole amount, was not made out in the legal form, as they allowed six months to intervene before the Collector receiving bonded whisky was required to transmit his certificate of its receipt to the Collector from whose district it came, whereas the law requires that only thirty days shall elapse before such receipt is given. Directions given to Collectors, instructing them how to proceed in cases where they were not personally cognizant of the sufficiency of the sureties, were also said to have been violated.

District-Attorney KEASBY summed up for the prosecution, and Messrs. J. W. SCUDDER and B. WILLIAMSON for the defendants.

The charge to the jury was delivered by Judge FIELD yesterday. He charged strongly against the defendant, and spoke of the importance of the decision in this case to govern the disposition of future cases.

THE LAFON TRAGEDY.

Trial, Conviction and Sentence of the Prisoner.

The last scene of a very sad and tragic life-drama was yesterday enacted in the Court of Oyer and Terminer of Essex County, New-Jersey, the sentencing of THOMAS LAFON, Jr., a youth of 20, for the manslaughter of JOSEPH HEBRING, a young German, 18 years of age. The condemned is the son of one of the most highly respected citizens of Newark, Dr. THOMAS LAFON, who resides at No. 8 Cedar-street, Newark. Young LAFON is an intelligent-looking youth, with a prepossessing face and appearance, and is a student of Oberlin College, from which he was absent on vacation when the dreadful occurrence took place, which, from the long train of calamities and evils with which it is fraught, may be regarded as one of the most untoward events that have ever happened in Newark. The family of LAFON is widely known, and his trial excited the most intense interest, the Court-room being constantly crowded to its utmost capacity. The circumstances of the case are as follows: On the morning of the 8th of December, JOSEPH LAFON, a younger brother of THOMAS, was engaged in shoveling snow in front of his father's house. At this time THOMAS LAFON was in the front parlor watching his brother. A butcher's covered wagon, driven by JOSEPH HEBRING, passed at this moment, and young LAFON, in boyish sport, threw some snow into HEBRING's wagon with his shovel. HEBRING became enraged at this, and exclaimed, "D—n you, if you throw any more show I'll break your head;" to which the boy replied, "No you won't;"—this is the only expression there is evidence of his having made use of. It has been stated that he threw some more snow, but of this there appears to be insufficient proof. HEBRING drove to the corner, hitched his horse, then returning, rushed at the boy, made an indiscriminate blow, and closed with him. As he was a powerfully-built young fellow, he soon succeeded in overpowering the boy, and commenced dealing him heavy and quickly-repeated blows on the face and body. At this juncture, THOMAS LAFON, who had left the window when the snow was thrown, not deeming it a matter of any moment, returned and beheld the situation of his brother, ran out to his assistance bare-headed, in his slippers. Catching up the shovel near the blade, he began to use the handle of it pretty freely upon the body of his brother's assailant, who, rising at the third blow, received it on the side of the head, immediately above the ear, at the point where the skull is thinnest, and fell backward groaning. LAFON terrified at what he had done, ran into the house, up the stairs, and excitedly told his mother what had occurred, and asked her to assist him. He then rushed out again, and his mother coming down, met him at the threshold leading HEBRING in. She directed her son to take HEBRING into the basement, as the upper part of the house was being swept and was cold. There the sufferer's wounds were washed and he carefully attended to by the partner of Dr. LAFON, Dr. DENNIS, Dr. LAFON being absent. Though conscious, and only a little dizzy at the time, so that it was judged expedient to send him home, HEBRING died six days afterward from the effect of this unlucky blow.

The unhappy author of his death was arrested, and after a trial lasting four days, was convicted of manslaughter. The counsel for the prisoner, Messrs. CORTLANDT PARKER and P. BRADLEY, argued the case in an able and exhaustive manner, and made eloquent appeals to the jury in his behalf. The defence claimed that in rescuing his brother, THOMAS LAFON had a right to use a certain amount of force, provided that amount did not exceed lawful bounds; that the peril to the younger LAFON was very great, as he was completely in the power of an enraged man, with the whole strength of whose arm blows were being struck upon his defenceless face and body; and that HEBRING's death was not the result of a willful intent to kill, but an accident occasioned by his raising his head too suddenly. This is what is termed homicide by misadventure, and this theory was very strongly urged upon the jury as the only probable one they could accept. Much stress was laid upon the pardonable warmth of a brother's feelings at such a critical moment, and total absence of premeditation. The prosecution was ably conducted by Mr. TITSWORTH, the District-Attorney, and his argument was ingenious and eloquent. The jury, after being out three hours, found the prisoner guilty of manslaughter, but very earnestly recommended him to the mercy of the Court. Mr. C. PARKER, counsel for the prisoner, then moved for a new trial, and 10 o'clock yesterday morning was fixed for the hearing of the argument upon this point. Before the appointed hour arrived the Court-room was packed with an anxious gathering of all classes. Many of the wealthiest and most respectable people in Newark and vicinity were present; among them ladies beautifully and fashionably attired. Mingled with these were observed many of the lower class, poorly attired, and by far the larger class, poorly attired, with none of the evidences of prosperity or wealth about them; and among them a great many Germans, who manifested a feeling of hatred toward the prisoner and those in sympathy with him. In fact, the remarks of the District-Attorney, when bearing with tremendous severity against the accused, had been received by them with applause, which, however, was promptly checked. This feeling of bitterness toward the prisoner and his family has gradually intensified and increased, aided no doubt by the malevolent efforts of ill-disposed and malicious persons, originated partly from the difference in social position of the accused and the deceased, which engendered a suspicion common to vulgar minds that justice would not be so blind or impartial as she should be, but would favor the side of the rich, and partly, so far as the Germans are concerned, from the fact of the deceased being a countryman. This sentiment of hostility caused the friends of the deceased to regard the trial as a direct issue between them and the wealthier class, whom they suppose to be friendly to the prisoner. Mr. BRADLEY opened the argument. When his motion was made on Saturday last he had not seen a printed copy of the charges. He had since examined it with more attention. In the first place it entirely overrules the ground of misadventure, which was one of the principal grounds of defence. He proceeded to read from the charge as printed in the papers, in which it says, after discussing the question of misadventure, "Obviously the defendant is not to be excused on that ground." He did not see that the matter had been fully and fairly discussed. A master in correcting his servant meant bodily harm, yet he should not be held accountable if death followed from misadventure. He cited several instances of death from misadventure. He contended his theory was sustained by Lord HALE and other authorities.

In reply, Mr. TITSWORTH said it seemed to him as if counsel for defendant wanted to have the cased tried over again, and the defendant acquitted. He never knew, in a case which had excited so much interest, less said of a general nature in a charge than had been done in this case. It only contained the stern truths of the law.

After some further remarks, Judge DEPUE desired the prisoner to stand up, and, amid the hush of the densely packed Court-room, said that pity for the youth of the prisoner and regard for his family restrained the Court from visiting him with the heaviest penalty of the law for manslaughter, and that, therefore, he should sentence him to one year in the State Prison and to pay $500 fine. As soon as the sentence was passed audible tokens of dissatisfaction were expressed by a portion of the spectators, which, however, were quickly silenced, and the greater portion of the spectators shortly afterward dispersed.

The prisoner seemed rather relieved than otherwise at the announcement of his sentence, but his sister bowed her head and seemed to be weeping bitterly, and his father and little brother seemed much moved.

The Rogers Murder.

It will be seen by our law reports that the Logan habeas corpus case came up again yesterday, and that Judge BARNARD decided, among other things, that there is no evidence implicating JAMES LOGAN No. 1 in the crime, and accordingly ordered him to be discharged upon his own recognizance in $1,000 for his appearance if wanted. As a consequence of this decision, a blank printed form of a recognizance was sent to the Fifteenth Precinct Station-house for LOGAN to sign, whereupon he was to be discharged. The blank was taken to LOGAN, and its purport explained. The blanches and wearied prisoner looked at the document doubtfully, and finally refused to sign it. He said he did not know what it was, and would sign nothing unless advised by counsel. This advice does not appear to have been given, for up to a late hour last night the blank remained unsigned, and LOGAN still occupied the cell where he has rotted for the last five weeks. The days of his imprisonment are however drawing to a close, as he will probably be informed to-day that no damage will ensue from his executing the recognizance, and the document being signed, he will be at liberty. JAMES LOGAN No. 2, ROBINSON and REILLY also remain in custody, and hence there has been no change whatever in the status of the Rogers case.

Trichinosis.

The sailor HEMAN, one of the eight persons suffering from trichinosis, caused by eating diseased pork, as reported in the TIMES yesterday, is now at the Brooklyn City Hospital, and is in a fair way of recovery. Yesterday Dr. JAS. G. GREGORY, of the Hospital, diagnosticated the case, removed a portion of the muscle from the patient's arm, and submitted it to a microscopic examination, which revealed the fact of the presence of the parasites, or trichinæ spirales, though in an incysted state. When they reach this condition, the trichinæ are no longer capable of doing harm, as they lie perfectly dormant and cease to propagate. The two patients in the New-York Hospital are also recovering.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

New-York.

JOHN KOFFMAN, No. 92½ Bowery, yesterday caused the arrest of RICHARD MAYNES, who, he alleges, attacked him on the corner of Catharine and Henry streets, and attempted to steal his watch. The prisoner in reply said that KOFFMAN was himself the assaulting party, and that no attempt had been made to rob him. The accused was, however, held by Justice LEDWITH in $500 bail for trial at the General Sessions.

Revenue Officers WM. H. CRAIG and H. L. JEWETT, acting under the orders of Supervisor DUTCHER, have seized 125 barrels of whisky, for violation of the Internal Revenue law. The whisky came from Chicago. The case has been turned over to Collector SHOOK, of the Thirty-second District, for adjudication.

The present term of the evening schools was concluded last evening. There was a larger and more regular attendance than during any previous session, and the probability is that more room will be required for next year's purposes.

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the College of the City of New-York, held yesterday afternoon, Mr. ALFRED G. COMPTON was appointed Professor of Mixed Mathematics. Commissioner EWING presented to the same Board a petition that greater facilities be afforded to students to learn the German language, in the College, which was referred to the Executive Committee. The Board then adjourned.

Mr. A. C. ARNOLD, Acting Superintendent of the Howard Mission and Home for Little Wanderers, desires to warn the public against contributing money or supplies to persons representing themselves as connected with the institution, as the Mission has no authorized collectors in the City. Any contributions sent to No. 40 New Bowery will reach the little ones.

Yesterday morning a Western man attracted considerable attention in Broadway by driving a horse attached to a buggy, without reins. The animal threaded his way between the various vehicles with great precision, his movements being regulated by the driver's whip pressed on the side of his neck. When the whip was raised the animal stopped.

JESSE ALLEN and JAMES LYON, both notorious for offences against the law, made their escape, on Tuesday night, from the Hartford State Prison, where they were serving out a term of imprisonment on conviction for a felony in the State of Connecticut. The authorities offer a reward of $500 for their arrest.

An attempt was made yesterday to fire the tenement-house of HERMAN MANN, No. 219 East Thirty-fifth-street. The cracks in the cellar partition had been filled with paper saturated with kerosene oil, but the circumstance was discovered in time to prevent any damage being done. A similar attempt was made at the same place some three weeks ago. The matter is being investigated by the Fire Marshal.

The number of emigrants arrived at Castle Garden, up to the 17th inst., was 7,706: to the same date last year, 7,739 had arrived.

DE GARMO's soirée at his academy, corner of Fourteenth-street and Fifth-avenue, Tuesday night, was a brilliant affair and was very largely attended.

Brooklyn.

DAVID A. CYPHER, a clerk in the shoe store of R. KEBNER, No. 101 Fulton-street, was arrested yesterday afternoon, and taken before United States Commissioner JONES, charged with having passed on SARAH LINTON, on Monday last, a counterfeit $3 bill of the Union National Bank of Kinderhook. The accused was held for further examination on Saturday.

Owing to the illness of Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER, he did not lecture at the Plymouth Church Bethel last evening. Prof. WORCESTER, the accomplished stereopticonist, supplied the appointment, and gave a most superb entertainment with his views of Paris and the Exposition, and points of interest along the Pacific Railroad. The exhibition throughout was full of interest and information, and was well received by the large and very respectable audience. Prof. WORCESTER will repeat the exhibition at the Forsyth-street M. E. Church next Monday evening.

It was rumored in Police circles in Brooklyn yesterday and during the evening that the public might expect to hear of at least one escape from the Raymond-street jail, probably before morning. It was suggested that in such an event it would be a saving to the county to allow the prisoners the freedom of the yard during the night time, as it would not be necessary to have the doors mutilated and locks broken.

From the eighteenth annual report of the Williamsburg Savings Bank, it appears that the number of deposits made during the year was 26,691, and the number of drafts made during the year was 21,022. On Jan. 1 the deposits in the bank amounted to $6,968,843 72, and the total liabilities of the bank amounted to $6,770,071 04. It is understood that the trustees of the institution have purchased lots for a new edifice, on the corner of Broadway and Fifth-street.

Card from Mr. J. B. H. Weaver Relative to the Remains of J. Wilkes Booth.

Mr. WEAVER sends the following note correcting some statements made by our correspondent in Baltimore:

BALTIMORE, Wednesday, Feb. 17.

The remains of J. WILKES BOOTH, now in my charge, have been kept with the utmost privacy. No crowds have been seen about my premises, which are located on a secluded street, and none but a few who had personal relations with the deceased have looked upon the remains for purposes of satisfactory identification of clothing, &c. No curious crowds have cut the blankets almost to pieces, as stated in your special dispatch, and there is no disposition on the part of anybody to get up a demonstration. The remains will be quietly deposited in my private vaults, in Green Mound Cemetery, to-morrow, without any ceremony whatever, religious or otherwise. They will rest there until such time as it may please the relatives of deceased to deposit them finally with the bones of other members of the family in Baltimore Cemetery, near the grave of JUNIUS BRUTUS BOOTH, the elder.
